Post-War Program

THE NAVY TODAY

BY THE HON. JOHN L. SULLIVAN
Secretary of the Navy

We live in a dangerous age—an age in which science and the ingenuity of men have mastered the art of mass destruction, and endowed individual nations with the power to transform world peace into global war, order into chaos, and life into death. We continue to hope and work and pray that through international agreement the world will be spared from the disaster of another war. Whether we realize this hope will depend largely on how we utilize the natural wealth, productivity and spirit of the United States. The miracles of atomic energy, electronics, and jet propulsion have diminished the importance of the distance factor, just as they have increased the importance of the time factor in modern warfare. To insure the safety of the nation and strengthen an unstable peace, we can and must overcome the handicaps inherent in each of these factors.

The Navy, with its air and submarine components, is a long-range weapon for peace. It has proved its ability to overcome the obstacle of distance—to carry wars to the enemy and keep them away from our own territory. Without this mobile force, of great endurance and long operating radius, both our own security and the peace of the world are endangered.

By being prepared, at sea, on land, and in the air, the United States can also neutralize tendencies toward aggression on the part of any nation. The suddenness with which total war can engulf nations and continents was tragically illustrated in 1939 when Hitler marched into Poland and again in 1941 when we were attacked at Pearl Harbor. It would be suicidal to suppose that, with all the developments in weapons and techniques of the past decade, war would not strike us with even greater suddenness and impact, if ever it should come again.

On this fourth Navy Day since V-J Day, it is appropriate that we take stock of the means we now possess to keep the world at peace and to prevent another war. The National Defense Team—Army, Navy and Air Force, each with its own important components—is our military means of giving strength to our peaceful foreign policy. It is a weapon for defense, not for aggression; it is a Team in which each member service is dependent on the others, for support, assistance, and the coordination of effort.

The Navy is a very important member of this team. Our naval forces in European and Mediterranean waters are a constant stabilizing influence in areas where explosive incidents might occur. Our activities in these waters are excellent training for the personnel in single ship and task force operations in confined seas—seas in which, before the war, the U. S. fleets had few opportunities to navigate. Furthermore, the sight of our flag flying at the masthead of trim, powerful

Services Strive to Cut Budget, Build Reserves

Secretary of Defense James Forrestal and the heads of the Departments of the Army, Navy, and Air Force are considering the steps necessary to meet the requirements of the unexpected Presidential order to strengthen the Reserves. The directive of the President came in the form of an Executive Order, supplemented by a public statement and a letter to the Secretary of Defense.

The Executive Order directs the Secretary of Defense and the head of each department in the National Military Establishment to proceed without delay to organize Reserve units and to train such additional members of the Reserves as may be required, and to establish vigorous and progressive training programs for all elements of the Reserve. It calls for a report from the Secretary of Defense in 60 days, showing the action taken and outlining proposed legislation or other appropriate measures deemed necessary to assure the maximum effectiveness of the program.

In his letter to Mr. Forrestal the President made five suggestions for attaining the objectives of his order. They were:

- (1) The assignment of a capable, high-ranking officer to head the Reserve program in each department;
- (2) The assignment of an adequate number of young and vigorous officers as instructors and administrative officers to conduct Reserve training;
- (3) Increased General Staff interest in Reserve activities;
- (4) Institution of training programs designed to hold the interest and improve the skills of members of the Reserve; and
- (5) More adequate training facilities, with increased co-operation of all Reserve components in the utilization of existing structures.

In a press conference at the time the Executive Order and accompanying documents were released the President said that he had directed that the budget estimates of the National Military Establishment be limited to $14.4 billions for the coming fiscal year. Previously the Bureau of the Budget had directed that the estimates be held to $15 billions. The apparent discrepancy in the figures may be due to the fact that the Bureau of the Budget included in its directive estimated expenditures for stockpiling strategic materials, believed to be about $600 millions, which may not have been included in the figure announced by the President. Mr. Truman said that the original estimate of the defense agencies was $23 billions. It is understood that this figure was a tentative one, not formally submitted to the Bureau of the Budget. The overall figure of $15 billions fixed by the Bureau of the Budget compares with the total authority for new obligations for the current fiscal year of $14.7 billions. In this total are included regular and supplemental appropriations and authorizations, such as $525 million for stockpiling, $365 million for training one-year enlistees, as well as two billion for the Air Force, and

Navy Shipbuilding & Conversion

BY VICE ADM. EARLE W. MILLS, USN
Chief of the Bureau of Ships

THE Navy's postwar shipbuilding and conversion program is directed towards providing certain advanced prototypes in the minimum numbers necessary for service evaluation.

Wherever possible, the need for new types has been filled by converting existing ships. In certain cases where the design characteristics could not be economically attained by conversion, it has been necessary to undertake the construction of new ships.

In general, the prototypes developed by the Navy will incorporate improvements based upon the experience gained during the war. They will, at the same time, include many technological advances perfected since the war.

The development of prototype designs has proceeded in four major fields. It has been our objective, by construction or conversion, to provide: first, aircraft carriers capable of handling the fast, heavy, long-range naval planes developed and under development since the war; second, high-speed, deep-submergence submarines; third, anti-submarine vessels to combat these submarines; and, fourth, ships equipped for polar and picket service.

To accommodate the increased size and power of modern naval aircraft, the Navy will construct a 65,000-ton flush-deck aircraft carrier, and convert two Essex Class carriers.

Designated CVA-58, but as yet unnamed, the 65,000-ton carrier will have an over-all length of 1,090 feet. Her waterline beam will be 130 feet, and her maximum fixed width will be 190 feet. With her elevators and other temporary structures in place, she will have a width of 255 feet. Her long, armored flight deck, free of any island structure to limit the wingspread of the planes she will carry, will be capable of handling planes up to 100,000 pounds.

Concurrent with the construction of this big carrier, the Navy will strengthen the flight decks and increase the catapult and elevator capacity of two 27,000-ton carriers, the USS Essex (CV-9) and the USS Wasp (CV-18). This conversion, ultimately planned for all of the Essex Class carriers, will greatly extend the range and striking power of our fast carrier task forces.

Most of the remaining ships in the Navy's postwar shipbuilding and conversion program are designed to provide prototypes for the sub or antisub phase of undersea warfare. Our strategic position is unique in that we must pursue with equal vigor the perfection of tactics, weapons, and devices utilized in both phases of undersea warfare. In the event of emergency, we must be prepared to launch a submarine offensive and, at the same time, repel any submarine offensive directed towards our life lines.

The offensive aspect of submarine warfare involves the construction of six submarines and the conversion of four others for specialized service. The six new boats, though comparable in size to the fleet type submarine which served so well during the war, will be streamlined and capable of much higher submerged speeds than any of our present subs. For specialized service, we are converting two submarines to submarine transports, one to a cargo submarine, and one to a submarine oiler.

To combat the increased offensive power of the modern submarine, the Navy is constructing nine ships and converting twenty others.

The construction program includes two anti-submarine cruisers, four destroyers, and three anti-submarine submarines. As their name implies, the two anti-submarine cruisers will be large ships fitted with the latest weapons and devices for locating, tracking, and killing the high-speed submarine. The four destroyers, larger than their wartime 2,400-ton predecessors, will have a dual function. Essentially anti-submarine vessels, they will also have the speed, endurance, and sea-keeping qualities which will permit them to serve with the fast carrier task forces. The three anti-submarine submarines will be smaller than any subs built in recent years but fully equipped to do battle with other submarines on or beneath the surface.

The twenty-ship anti-submarine conversion program includes two light carriers, twelve 2,100-ton Fletcher Class destroyers, and six 2,200-ton Allen M. Sumner Class destroyers. The two light carriers, the USS Cabot (CVL-28) and the USS Bataan (CVL-29), will, because of their greater size and speed, be able to wage more efficient warfare against the modern submarine than the slower, smaller escort carriers which broke the U-Boat offensive in World War II. Similarly, by converting the twelve 2,100-ton destroyers to destroyer escorts and the six 2,200-ton destroyers to hunter-killer destroyers, we will be able to utilize the speed and sea-keeping qualities of these larger ships for the functions performed during World War II by destroyer escorts and frigates. In anti-sub warfare, the emphasis of necessity must be on high-speed escort vessels lest the quarry outrun the pursuer.

The remaining seven ships in the Navy's postwar conversion program will emphasize changes necessary for polar or picket service. Two destroyer escorts and two submarines will be specially fitted for off-shore aircraft detection. One cargo ship and two Landing Ship Docks (LSDs) will be converted for service in polar waters.

In allocating this new ship construction and conversion work, the Navy gave careful consideration to a problem directly affecting our national security. During the war, private shipbuilding plants built about 63% of the combatant ship tonnage, as well as virtually all of the auxiliaries and landing craft. Since the war, there has not been a sufficient backlog of work in the private shipyards to occupy their essential design personnel and maintain their vital shipbuilding skills. The naval shipyards, on the other hand, have been kept busy with a continuing program of ship repair and overhaul.

With these facts in mind, every attempt was made to allocate the construction and conversion of these ships so as to balance the impact of this program upon the design staffs of both the private and the Naval shipyards. Thus, both will be ready to serve the nation in the event of another emergency.

Navy Day Greetings

The ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL joins the following in a salute to the Sea Services upon the occasion of Navy Day.

The Honorable James Forrestal, Secretary of Defense—"On behalf of the National Military Establishment, I extend greetings to the Navy on its celebration of Navy Day, 1948. The vigilance and loyalty which are part of the Navy's proud tradition are adding in great measure to the rebuilding of American military readiness against any eventuality. I congratulate the Navy's men and women on their contributions to the building of our team of land, sea and air forces for the security of the United States and the maintenance of peace."

The Honorable Kenneth C. Royall, Secretary of the Department of the Army—"Throughout the long history of our Republic—for nearly 175 years—the very name of the United States Navy has been synonymous with greatness. It has forever stood as a guardian of the country it helped to make free and great, and is today so much a part of America that its feats and the names of its heroes are common knowledge up and down the width and breadth of the land. On this Navy Day, ours is the greatest and mightiest Navy in the world. As such, it is one of the greatest and mightiest forces for peace in the world. In our own interest—in the interest of all peoples who would live in the light of democracy and freedom as opposed to the darkness of tyranny and oppression, we must keep it strong and ready. The Army is proud of the long and brilliant record of its sister service, proud of the privilege it has had of working with it side by side in war and peace. Filled with this pride, we salute the Navy today, firm in the conviction that continuance of our country's greatness rests in large part on the continued greatness of our Navy."

The Honorable John L. Sullivan, Secretary of the Department of the Navy—"October 27th this year marks the 173d anniversary of the founding of the United States Navy and the second Navy Day we have observed as a member of the Lend-Sea-Air Defense Team we call the National Military Establishment. Again the Navy Department is happy to welcome all Americans, and especially the members of our sister Armed Services, aboard our ships and stations to share our pride in the Sea-Air power we maintain to help protect the nation's security and to guard the peace of the world. The Navy today is an important part of that national strength on which we rely to keep ourselves safe and the world free. Its trained sailors and marines man the ships, planes and shore establishments which are the essentials of modern Sea-Air power. Our Navy is the direct and personal possession of the American people, and so long as it has their support, the people and this country will have a staunch defender of their liberties, their land and their institutions. A strong Navy, now as in the past, is the bulwark against aggression and a guarantee that the ravages of war shall be kept as far removed as possible from our shores. May our pride today in the past achievements and present condition of the United States Navy be our pledge to maintain it always in effective readiness to guard our lives and our homes and the democratic ideals we cherish."

The Honorable W. Stuart Symington, Secretary of the Department of the Air Force—"It gives me great pleasure to extend the congratulations of the Department of the Air Force to the Department of the Navy on this twenty-seventh observance of Navy Day. The record of the United States Navy in the defense of our country is one of which every citizen is justly proud."

General Omar N. Bradley, Chief of Staff, U. S. Army—"I am happy to extend the greetings of the Army to the United States Navy on its 173d anniversary. Together we have faced the tremendous problem of building a National Military Establishment in the midst of these trying times. The singleness of purpose, an adequate defense for our nation, is evident. The accomplishments of our cooperation are becoming more apparent day by day. The Navy has brought to this unification a background of tradition, of gallantry, and victory that commands the respect and admiration of all of us. On this anniversary, Americans everywhere have reason to be proud of the men and women of our Naval forces. As soldiers, we salute the great deeds and wish you well."

Admiral Louis Denfeld, Chief of Naval Operations—"The United States Navy stands ready today, as always, to guard the sea approaches to this nation and to spearhead the projection of American fighting might abroad. Rapid strides in technological development have tremendously increased the mobility, striking power and versatility of the Navy's ships, planes, and submarines. Capable of waging immediate, three-dimensional warfare thousands of miles from our shores in any part of the world, United States Naval Forces afford Americans a measure of security not enjoyed by any other people. The continued possession of modern and well-balanced fighting fleets capable of fighting equally well on, above and below the surface of the seas will enable us to maintain this advantage. As one member of the team composed of the Armed Forces of the United States, a strong Navy remains our best guarantee of continued freedom."

General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Chief of Staff, U. S. Air Force—"The twenty-seventh annual observance of Navy Day affords a welcome opportunity to extend wholehearted congratulations on behalf of the Air Force to the United States Navy. The men and women of the Air Force are proud to join Americans in all walks of life in honoring the Navy for its one hundred and seventy-three years of valorous service in peace and in war."

Admiral J. F. Farley, Commandant, U. S. Coast Guard—"On behalf of the United States Coast Guard, I extend sincere best wishes to the officers, men and women of the United States Navy on the occasion of Navy Day, 1948. The existing troubled world situation accentuates the interest and appreciation which all Americans have for the important role of sea power—our Navy—in our national defense. The Navy, today, a highly developed mobile, scientific, advanced striking power is more than ever a bulwark in the guarding of our peace. The Coast Guard congratulates the Navy on its splendid record of accomplishments and joins the Nation in paying tribute on this occasion."

Navy Procurement

BY THE HON. MARK EDWIN ANDREWS,
Assistant Secretary of the Navy

NEW developments in post-war Navy procurement are of two principal kinds: an important new procurement statute, and an increased tempo in coordinating the procurement activities of the Army, Navy, and Air Force. Fortunately the new legislation facilitates effective inter-Service coordination, and thus these two developments are complementary, as will appear below.

After V-J Day, the Navy realized that, when the war powers expired, it would once again be governed by permanent statutes inadequate to provide for good peacetime procurement and inadequate also for any future wars. Accordingly, in conjunction with the other Services, the Navy sought adequate modern procurement legislation. The result was the Armed Services Procurement Act (Public Law 413, 80th Congress), effective 19 May 1948.

This Act is the first major change since 1861 in permanent military procurement legislation. It reaffirms our traditional system of formal advertising and competitive bidding, but it also authorizes the negotiation of contracts in certain specified instances where such negotiation is necessary to effect good procurement. It untangled many earlier statutes relating to procurement by the Armed Services and brought military procurement policies more generally in line with those governing private business operations. At the same time it maintains the safeguards expected of public agencies.

Exceptions from formal advertising are permitted in seventeen types of situations. These exceptions make good sense from a military and from a business point of view. One of the most important permits negotiation in the event of a National emergency declared by the President or by the Congress. Our experience in World War II conclusively showed the need for this authority during periods of emergency.

The Act also authorizes the use of contracts tailored to cover negotiated agreements. However, the cost-plus-a-percentage-of-cost type of contract is expressly prohibited. Without "tailor-made" contracts, negotiation would be meaningless.

The wide diversity of previous statutes led to many differences in procurement policies among the Services, which greatly complicated the task of doing business with the Military Departments. The new uniform statutory authority in procurement matters permits the development of common policies, and it has thus greatly facilitated the coordination of procedures and practices.

An "Armed Services Procurement Regulation" is currently being written under the direction of an inter-Service Committee. This Regulation implements the Armed Services Procurement Act and restates in a single regulation the basic policies previously promulgated separately by the Military Departments. The views of industry have been solicited in order to make these Regulations as simple and workable as possible. Attention is being given by both the Services and Industry to the need for having peacetime policies and methods readily adaptable to emergency conditions. Several Sections of this Regulation have been completed and published; the remainder are expected to be completed early in 1949. These uniform Regulations should be of great assistance to military suppliers in simplifying their dealings with the Armed Services.

The second important factor in post-war Navy procurement has been in the assignment of purchase responsibilities among the Services. Having one Service buy for another is not a postwar innovation. During World War II the Army Quartermaster Corps purchased food for both Services. The Army and the Navy as a result of their operations in connection with the Aeronautical Board have for several years purchased various types of aeronautical material for each other.

However, during the war, there were many areas in which each Service purchased its own requirements of identical or similar types of supplies. Although this is not necessarily bad, there were occasions when confusion in industry resulted. The Services, led by the Munitions Board, are now seeking to overcome these deficiencies of World War II procurement.

Three principal methods of assigning procurement responsibilities for various types of commodities have been developed. First—collaborative buying, in which the Services do their own buying but at a common location, thus facilitating ready interchange of information. For example, textiles are purchased by Army and Navy personnel at a single office located in New York. Second—joint buying, in which the total requirements for all Services are purchased by a single agency staffed by the participating Services. One such Joint Agency purchases petroleum and another, medicines and medical supplies. Third—single Service buying, in which all of the requirements of the three Services for a given commodity are procured by one Service. Thus, the Navy buys solid fuels for the National Military Establishment, the Army buys lumber, and the Air Force photographic equipment.

Now that the best wartime procurement practices have been integrated with the best peacetime methods, and the Navy's post-war procurement organization is solidly established, we are giving attention to integrating procurement with the over-all industrial mobilization planning now under way. We must relate to Navy procurement planning the effects of priorities, allocations of material, renegotiation and other wartime controls which are likely to reshape military procurement during any future war.

The importance of procurement to the Military Establishment must not be underestimated. Through procurement, our Military Forces are kept supplied with the materials and equipment necessary to maintain a fighting force in readiness for any emergency which may arise. The success of our expanding aircraft program depends, in a substantial measure, on sound procurement. Passage of the Armed Services Procurement Act shows general recognition of this fact.

The Services are mindful of their responsibilities to utilize sound business practices and to achieve the maximum of effective coordination. I believe that they are discharging their procurement responsibilities well, and that National security is being directly benefited.

Paintings at USNA Museum

Capt. Harry A. Baldridge, USN, (Ret.), Curator of the Naval Academy Museum, has announced the opening of the U. S. Naval Academy Museum Loan Exhibition of paintings by personnel of the Severn River Naval Command. The Exhibition, in the lobby of the Naval Academy Museum, will run from 15 Oct. through 1 Nov.

Exhibiting their works in the Loan Exhibition are: Lt. Comdr. Charles A. Hoffman, USNR; Mrs. Lindsay Sacrey; Mr. Carson Bush, Mrs. John H. Griffin; Mrs. James J. Southerland; Miss Alice Crenshaw; Mrs. Carlyl J. Hoffer; Mr. William Gantt; Mrs. John F. Duffell; Lt. Comdr. Vining A. Sherman, USN; Mrs. Ira Gorell; Mrs. Robert J. Carter; Lt. Robert J. Carter, USN; Mrs. Clay Raney; Mrs. George A. Lyle; Mr. Herbert W. Davey; Mrs. B. J. Lofland; Mr. Warren Smith; Mrs. Arthur G. Harrison; Mr. L. W. Bailey; Mr. Hamilton Jackson.

Reserve Research Unit

The 2901st Research and Development Training Group, Organized Reserve Corps, was activated this week under command of Col. John N. Andrews, personal representative to the Administrator, Veterans Administration. Members are scientists and specialists who hold Reserve commissions and whose professional abilities will be utilized by the Army in the event of an emergency.

Participating in the activation ceremony were Lt. Gen. H. S. Aurand, Director, Logistics Division; Maj. Gen. A. C. McAuliffe, Chief, Research and Development Group, and Brig. Gen. Wendell Westover, Executive for Reserve and ROTC Affairs.

Attend Medical Meeting

Brig. Gen. Raymond O. Dart, MC, Director, and Dr. Webb Haymaker, Chief of the Section on Neuropathology, Army Institute of Pathology, attended the meeting of the Streptomycin Committee of the Veterans Administration to be held in St. Paul, Minn., 19 to 23 Oct.

Recent Gains in Navy Training

By REAR ADM. THOMAS L. SPRAGUE, USN
The Chief of Naval Personnel

ON this fourth Navy Day since the end of World War II, the Navy again is rapidly approaching the high standard of training so essential to the conduct of modern warfare. Our personnel situation is becoming more stabilized and the many problems that grew out of demobilization are fast being solved.

More enlisted men today are choosing the Navy as a lifetime career or have enrolled for active participation in Naval Reserve activities.

During the past year, 38 per cent of the enlistments have been by men with previous Naval experience who wish to continue professional Navy careers.

One major factor contributing to this high reenlistment rate is the modernized training program initiated under the new promotion plan for enlisted personnel. Introduction of a "career advancement" policy is one of the more important features of this new program and several ratings previously "frozen" because of an excessive number of men within the rating group now are open to advancement by area competition.

The Navy intends to advance a certain number of men to each and every rate. This is being done to give every Navy man an opportunity to move forward, regardless of the rating he holds or the one in which he desires career training.

The Navy's program of instruction now is functioning according to a standardized plan.

Many billets now require specialized, advanced training and to fill these jobs the Navy maintains service schools to which men may be assigned after their recruit training. Upon completion of basic training at Great Lakes or San Diego, the Navy man today has access to 94 advanced training schools located at convenient points in the United States and from Trinidad to Guam.

At the present time, some 50,000 men are receiving Navy instruction—both basic and advanced—at these activities that produced such amazing results during the recent war.

It is important to note that these men, whether they remain in the service or not, are highly beneficial to the country as a whole because of the training they receive and the maturity they attain. This is true whether in the interest of current national security requirements, long range national security requirements, or in the interest of national industry to which they can bring a degree of ready-trained technical ability.

The Navy school system has two missions.

To provide basic indoctrination for individuals entering the Naval service, and

To provide elementary and advanced technical training for both non-rated personnel and petty officers, thereby helping them up the promotional ladder.

The education of all officer candidates commences in college—either at the Naval Academy or an NROTC or other accredited college, at a medical or dental school, or at a divinity school or seminary.

The Navy has modernized and expanded the NROTC program since the end of World War II and this program now is carried out in 52 colleges throughout the United States. It is expected that 1,700 officers will enter the Navy annually through the NROTC.

In addition to the Navy's general education program, there are 37 training schools for officers. These schools, designed to qualify the officer to perform certain specific duties, cover such varied subjects as torpedoes, anti-submarine devices, applied electronics, mine warfare, radar, applied aerology, damage control, fire fighting, civil government, languages and intelligence.

The Naval Aviation Cadet program has been reopened to assure a continuous flow of men into Fleet air activities, as well as providing a supply of newly trained personnel for the Naval Reserve.

Permanent commissions also are being given Limited Duty Officers through a new plan to provide the Navy with officers of wide Naval experience in highly specialized technical fields.

Another advancement in the history of Naval personnel was made this year when the President signed legislation authorizing the inclusion of women into the Regular Navy and Marine Corps. At present, the Navy is increasing its strength to the authorized level of 500 officers, 20 warrants, and 6,000 enlisted women. Women in the Navy continue to perform in a highly competent manner the many types of duty for which they are qualified.

Reactivation of the Naval Reserve was started officially in August 1945. Mission of this program is to furnish personnel required by mobilization plans who cannot be obtained through normal procurement and training after M-Day.

Since July 1946, this Naval Reserve program has moved forward to the point today that 85 per cent of personnel considered necessary for mobilization are on board.

Present status of the Naval Reserve with 306,000 officers and 710,000 enlisted men is in sharp contrast to the Reserve after World War I. Little attention was given the Naval Reserve until 1923, and as recent as 1938 the Reserve strength was only 21,000 officers and men.

The Organized Reserve today is composed primarily of 764 Surface Divisions and 314 Air Squadrons. Personnel are trained at Naval Reserve Training Centers throughout the country and 22 air stations. Two hundred and thirty armories are in operation, with contract arrangements completed for an additional 92.

These members of Organized Reserve units perform weekly drills and can request two weeks of active training each year. They receive pay for all drills and training duty.

The Volunteer Reserve—now numbering 286,000 officers and 546,000 enlisted men—offers an additional source of skilled personnel available for Navy service in time of emergency.

The Navy conducts an active program to encourage two weeks of annual instruction for Reserves and during the past fiscal year 36,000 officers and 61,000 enlisted men took advantage of this training-with-pay.

Today's Navy will continue to be the "guardian in peace" through the results of a vigorous training program to instruct all personnel in the basic and technical knowledge required for the adequate performance of their duties.

Training is a major weapon of modern warfare. It is a vitally important part of our national defense effort.

USNR Dentists to Duty

Fifteen civilian dentists have recently received appointments in the Naval Reserve and requested assignment to active duty for periods of one year or longer. They are:

- Lt. (jg) Robert D. Abelof, to Camp Lejeune, N. C.
- Lt. (jg) Nelson D. Bookstaver, to the Naval Shipyard, Portsmouth, N. H.
- Lt. (jg) Emile J. Charvet, to the Naval Shipyard, Norfolk, Va.
- Lt. (jg) Stanley P. Dodelson, to Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va.
- Lt. (jg) John J. Dunn, to Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, Calif.
- Lt. (jg) Martin J. Fields, to Naval Training Center, Great Lakes, Ill.
- Lt. (jg) Sidney Friedman, to Marine Corps Recruit Depot, Parris Island, S. C.
- Lt. (jg) Arthur Hader, to Naval Air Station, Patuxent River, Md.
- Lt. (jg) Ira H. Harrison, to the Naval Dental Clinic, Brooklyn, N. Y.
- Lt. (jg) Donald E. Keller, to Marine Corps Air Station, Cherry Point, N. C.
- Lt. (jg) Robert W. O'Connell, to Naval Station, Green Cove Springs, Fla.
- Lt. (jg) Donald C. Olson, to Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, Calif.
- Lt. (jg) Jack W. Seidenberg, to Great Lakes Naval Training Center.
- Lt. (jg) Joseph Siegelman, to the Naval Hospital, Philadelphia.
- Lt. (jg) Arthur Zinn, Jr., to the Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla.

Army Wants Women Medics

The Army Medical Department is seeking legislation to permit service of women as doctors, dentists and veterinarians.

Maj. Gen. Raymond W. Bliss, Surgeon General of the Army, reportedly has submitted the tentative draft of such legislation to Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall, for transmittal to Secretary of Defense James Forrestal.

If adopted, the legislation would open every Corps of the Medical Department to women officers.

In addition to authorizing service of women as doctors, dentists and veterinarians, the measure would permit commissioning of women in the Medical Service Corps.

The Navy recently commissioned a group of women doctors as officers in the Regular Navy.

During the war, the Army Medical Department utilized the services of 50 women medical consultants, but they were on duty in a civilian status.

The proposal to utilize women doctors and dentists calls for their being commissioned up to and including the grade of colonel. They would be required to meet identical standards as male officers.

Action to bring women into the Medical, Dental, Veterinary and Medical Service Corps comes at a time when the Army is confronted with one of the most serious shortages of medical personnel in its history.

At the present time, women are commissioned in the Medical Department only as nurses, occupational therapists, dietitians and physical therapists.

UNITED STATES ARMYNavy Day Guests

Lt. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, Second Army Commander; Maj. Gen. Charles L. Mullins, Jr., Deputy Commander, Second Army, and Maj. Gen. Robert B. McClure, Chief of Staff, have been invited to attend the Baltimore Navy Day luncheon 27 Oct. at the Southern Hotel.

Accelerate Army Career Program

The Army's vigorous policy of implementing the Enlisted Career Guidance Program was evidenced this week as Lt. Gen. Willard S. Paul, Director of Personnel and Administration, General Staff, declared that the program will be in full swing by the end of next year.

Said General Paul: "There have been several questions regarding the final date for the Army Enlisted Career Guidance Program. I want to reaffirm our fixed determination to push forward the implementation of the Enlisted Career Guidance Program to final completion as rapidly as humanly possible. At this time it appears that the Program will be in full swing by 31 Dec. 1949."

WAC Guest Conductor of AGF Band

In the interest of recruiting young women for the Women's Army Corps, Warrant Officer Katharine V. Allen, WAC Band Officer, is appearing as Guest Conductor of the 100-piece Army Ground Forces Band in a number of Southwestern and Southern cities beginning 16 Oct. in Oklahoma City, Okla. Capt. Chester E. Whiting is the regular conductor of the band.

Career Guidance Circular

The Army has published Circular No. 315 containing amendments to the Career Guidance Plan and including provisions for the promotion of enlisted personnel already assigned or slated for duty with cadres.

The circular also gives details concerning issuance of warrants, wearing of combat insignia, and promotions to grade six, previously reported.

With regard to promotions of cadre personnel, the Circular declares:

Promotion of enlisted personnel assigned to, or to be assigned to, cadres.—A unit or organization exercising promotion authority over an actual cadre provided by any commander who receives appropriate instructions to provide a cadre for another organization to be activated may take necessary action to promote to the authorized cadre grades all cadremen selected for such cadre under the provisions outlined below. These promotions may be made without regard to position vacancies in the source unit, the promoting unit, or any higher echelon above the source or promoting unit. Overages in grades resulting from this promotion will be carried as excess until absorbed by normal attrition.

a. Promotions will not be made for more than one grade.

b. Authorized grade for each cadre MOS will be that grade found in the appropriate table of organization cadre column or an appropriate document containing an authorized cadre break-down.

c. Promotions will not be made for individuals who are not in a promotable status as defined in paragraph 21. Such individuals ordinarily will not be placed on or assigned to any cadre.

d. Promotions will not be made if in the opinion of the promoting authority the individual, although selected for the cadre as the best qualified person available for the cadre assignment from the total personnel available for cadre purposes, is not believed actually qualified to perform the duties of the particular MOS in the grade called for by the table of organization or distribution, for which the individual has been selected.

e. Promotions may not be made to grade 1 unless and until within the major command concerned there are grade 1 vacancies. Where the authorized grade for any cadre MOS is grade 1, promotions may be made to grades below grade 1 if otherwise permitted. Promotions may, where otherwise permitted, be made in any case to lower grades than the authorized cadre grade.

f. Promotions will be made to grade 5 only for individuals who have a minimum of 6 months' service; to grade 4 only for individuals with a minimum of 16 months' service; to grade 3 only for individuals with a minimum of 28 months' service; to grade 2 only for individuals with a minimum of 36 months' service and to grade 1, if authorized under e above, only for individuals with a minimum of 36 months' service. Time in service will be computed as prescribed by paragraph 25b, as amended.

g. Promotions may not be made in any grade in excess of the total number of such grades authorized the particular unit or units required to produce the cadre together with the total cadre grade authorization for the same grade.

h. Promotions authorized above will not be effected earlier than 60 days prior to the effective date of departure of the cadre.

i. None of the above provisions are applicable for personnel who are classified into a career field.

Col. and Gen. Selection Boards

The Army anticipates that selection boards to consider officers for permanent promotion to general rank and to the grade of colonel will be convened shortly after the first of the year.

No definite date has been set as yet for the meeting of such boards.

Meantime, boards to consider officers for promotion to captain, major and lieutenant colonel are slated to begin meetings at Washington late this month. Details concerning officers to be considered by these boards were printed in last week's issue of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL.

Medical Department Board

The Medical Department Board at Brooke Army Medical Center, Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., has recently been reconstituted with membership as follows:

Maj. Gen. John M. Willis, M. C., U. S. Army.
Brig. Gen. Joseph I. Martin, M. C., U. S. Army.

Brig. Gen. Paul H. Streit, M. C., U. S. Army.
Brig. Gen. Harry G. Armstrong, M. C., U. S. Army (designated to represent the Chief of Staff, U. S. Air Force).

Col. Robert P. Williams, M. C. (designated to represent the Chief, Army Field Forces).
Col. Robert E. Peyton, M. C.
Col. James L. Snyder, M. C.

Maj. Jack P. Love, M. S. C., Recorder.
The Board considers Medical Department problems referred to it by the Surgeon General and originates and submits to the Surgeon General recommendations for improving the Army's medical service.

Food Service Pamphlet

Slated for early distribution following its return from the printer is a new Army pamphlet describing general references for courses of interest to Food service personnel.

The pamphlet is of particular interest as preparations are being completed for mid-November promotion examinations for Food Service personnel.

Army Emergency Relief

The Quarterly Meeting of Army Emergency Relief was held 19 Oct. 1948, at the Pentagon in the conference room of the Secretary of Defense.

The Director reported that, based on the first six months of the present fiscal year, Army Emergency Relief was disbursing in grants and loans at the rate of $514,000 a year. In addition to hearing the Quarterly Report, the Board reviewed and discussed the investment policy of Army Emergency Relief.

Among the members of the Board of Managers and Officers of Army Emergency Relief present were Maj. Gen. Edmond H. Leavelle, The Army Comptroller, presiding; Maj. Gen. Frank A. Helleman, Chief of the Transportation Corps; Maj. Gen. Walter K. Wilson, USA, Ret., Director; Brig. Gen. Eugene M. Foster, Assistant Chief of Finance, USA, Secretary; Mr. S. William Miller, Chairman of the Board, Union Trust Company, Washington, Treasurer; Col. Charles F. H. Johnson, President of Botany Mills; Mrs. David Wagstaff, Tuxedo Park, N. Y., President of Army Relief Society, Col. W. O. Rawls, USA, Ret., Assistant Treasurer; and Col. Henry H. Duval, USA, Ret., Assistant Secretary.

$753 million for the Navy in the supplemental act approved last May, and the $101 million for Navy public works in the second deficiency act.

At his press conference the President said that one of the principal purposes of the Executive Order concerning the Reserves was to stimulate organization and training of Reserve units of the Army and Air Force, which he said have not been functioning as actively as have those of the Navy and Marine Corps. The President said he favored a small professional military establishments, supplemented by active Reserves. He indicated that his order would not require the immediate expenditure of additional funds. He expressed the hope that the eventual annual cost of the Military Establishment could be reduced to between five and seven billion dollars.

Some surprise was expressed at the President's suggestion that a high-ranking officer be selected to head the Reserve program in each department. The President may not have been aware that each department now has a general officer or a flag officer in charge of Reserve affairs. At present Brig. Gen. Wendell Westover heads the Reserve affairs of the Army, Rear Adm. Ralph S. Riggs those of the Navy, and Brig. Gen. John P. McConnell those of the Air Force. There was no direct intimation that the President wanted these officers replaced.

There was considerable speculation as to whether or not the President had considered the comprehensive report of the Gray board on Reserve activities. This board made a large number of recommendations, some of which would necessitate legislative action, while others could be made effective by administrative procedure. Considerable additional expenditures were evidently envisioned by the board. The outstanding recommendation was for the federalization of the National Guard. This aroused so much controversy that the other recommendations received scant public attention.

For the Army, Brig. Gen. Wendell Westover issued a summary of current assignment and training opportunities for Army Reserve personnel, but made no direct comment on the Executive Order. He said that of the 286,000 Reserve officers on the Army rolls 137,000 have stated that they are available for assignment. Presumably the others would prefer to be retained only in an inactive status. There are 456,000 enlisted men in the Organized Reserves, but less than 200,000 are so situated or are sufficiently interested to volunteer for assignment and training. General Westover pointed out that the Reserve program required facilities, personnel, equipment and funds. He urged all members of the Organized Reserve to assume their share of the heavy burden of National Security.

An immediate comment on the President's Executive Order came from United States Senator Chan Gurney of South Dakota, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee. He said Congress would have to appropriate funds to implement any such order and added, "I can't see any good coming out of the order."

On the other hand the order was welcomed by Col. Clarence E. Barnes, president of the Reserve Officers' Association, as an acknowledgment of the main objective of his organization since the end of the war. He said Reserve officers consider the President's directive as absolutely essential. He said:

"The Reserve Officers' Association has been insisting for more than three years that Reserve personnel be organized into units sufficient in number and size to insure national security. We have found in recent surveys that the Reserve training, organization and assignment program in the Army and Air Force have been so long delayed that a large number of Reserve officers have lost interest."

The statement of President Truman, his letter to Secretary Forrestal and the Executive Order follow:

President's Statement

"In providing for national security it is a long-standing and wise tradition in our country to place great reliance on organized reserves of trained citizens to supplement the regular armed forces. Since the demobilization of our large war-time forces, the military services have been organizing reserve units and developing training programs for them in accordance with this traditional pattern.

"In order to complete the development of suitable reserve training programs, I have today, Oct. 15, issued an executive order directing the Secretary of Defense and the heads of the service departments to proceed without delay to organize all military reserve units required for the national security and to establish vigorous and progressive reserve training programs. In the same order I have urged every citizen to give full support to the reserve program in his local community, and every member of the reserve to take an active part in building up strong and highly trained reserve forces.

"I should like to pay particular tribute to the progress which has been made by the Navy Department and the members of the Naval and Marine Corps Reserve in building up their post-war reserve organizations and in forwarding their training programs. In much the same way the National Guard has largely perfected its post-war organization and the outstanding success of its recruiting drive during the course of the past year is a matter of great satisfaction to the Federal government, to the states (which have primary control of the guard), and to the members of the National Guard themselves.

"For many reasons the organized reserve corps of the Army and Air Force have not made as rapid progress. I assure the members of the reserves of the Army and the Air Force, however, that full force of the government will be exerted toward creating appropriate and effective reserve establishments as rapidly as possible.

"I have suggested to the Secretary of Defense certain specific steps which may be helpful in achieving the purposes of this order. I have requested him to report to me in sixty days the progress made under the order.

"I believe these actions will contribute substantially to our efforts to build strong and efficient defense forces consistent with our democratic traditions and our position in the world today."

Letter to Secretary Forrestal

"My dear Mr. Secretary:

"In order to further the objectives of the executive order which I have signed today and a copy of which is attached, and with particular reference to the departments of the Army and Air Force, I suggest the following actions:

"1. The assignment of an active, capable, high-ranking officer to head the reserve program in each department.

"2. The assignment of an adequate number of young and vigorous officers as instructors and administrative officers in programs of reserve training.

"3. Increased attention on the part of all general staff divisions to planning and directing reserve activities and reviewing accomplishments thereunder.

"4. The development and institution of training programs which will hold the interests of reservists at all levels and will maintain and improve the military skills which they have hitherto acquired by active service in the armed forces of the United States.

"5. The provision of more adequate training facilities and equipment, including active co-operation among all components of the reserve forces in the effective utilization of existing structures. By proceeding promptly to utilize every practicable resource of the services, it should be possible, with a minimum of delay, to organize all reserve component units required for the training of individuals in the active reserves in such a way as to give the balance necessary to our national defense in its broadest concept.

"You will note that the executive order directs that you submit within sixty days a report showing the action which has been taken by the national military establishment to carry out the order. I am particularly anxious that the report show the current status and degree of readiness of each of the major reserve components.

"It should also include a statement of the specific programs and schedules proposed or intended in effectuation of the order. This report is of the utmost importance, and I know that it will be a record of significant accomplishment. It is my desire that the widest possible distribution be given to the executive order through the channels available to the departments of the national military establishment for communicating with the reserve personnel. I know that the people of the United States will respond with enthusiasm to this program and that reservists in all categories will assist you in every way in which their services may be desired.

"Very sincerely yours,
Harry S. Truman."

Text of Executive Order

"Whereas it is the traditional national security policy of the United States to place great reliance on organized citizens' forces supporting regular armed forces of the minimum size consistent with national defense; and

"Whereas the national security requires that reserve components of appropriate strength and maximum effectiveness exist through the nation; and

"Whereas it is essential that the trained citizens who have completed a period of service in the armed forces continue to be available to the nation:

"Now, therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and statutes, and as President of the United States and Commander in Chief of the Armed Forces, it is hereby ordered as follows:

"1. The Secretary of Defense and the head of each department in the national military establishment, shall proceed without delay, utilizing every practicable resource of the regular components of the armed forces, to organize all reserve component units, and to train such additional individuals now or hereafter members of the active reserve, as may be required for the national security; and to establish vigorous and progressive programs of appropriate instruction and training for all elements of the reserve components, including the National Guard.

"2. The Secretary of Defense shall within sixty days after the date of this order submit to the President a report showing the action which has been taken by the national military establishment in respect hereof, and any proposed legislation or other measures deemed necessary or appropriate in the interest of the maximum effectiveness of the reserve components of the armed forces.

"3. Every citizen is urged to do his utmost in aiding the development of effective reserve components of our armed forces, and every person who is a member of a reserve component of the armed forces or who is qualified to become one is urged to take an active part in building up the strong and highly trained reserve forces which are so vital to the defense of the United States. Harry S. Truman,

"The White House, Oct. 15, 1948."

Xmas Appeal from Austria

A moving appeal to fellow Americans for assistance in providing a brighter Christmas for 240,000 orphans and children of destitute families in the U. S. Zone of Austria and in Vienna has been made by Lt. Gen. Geoffrey Keyes, U. S. High Commissioner in Austria.

Last year, the small group of Americans in Austria, civilian and military, contributed almost 25,000 to finance the Christmas cheer program. General Keyes has called upon other Americans to lend their assistance to Americans in Austria who this year again will entertain children from Austrian orphanages and from poor families at parties in mess halls, homes and places of entertainment.

General Keyes said:

"Our hearts are stirred by the almost universal picture of need that surrounds us here but our resources are limited and it is to provide for the large number that we cannot aid that we ask you, the American people, to assist us.

"The answer to how you can help is simple: A package of food or clothing addressed to the United States High Commissioner in Austria, APO 777, c/o Postmaster, New York, N. Y., Attention: Austrian Christmas Program Committee, will come to us and under American supervision will be given to some deserving individual or family. The gift will be marked as coming from you and its receipt will be acknowledged.

"The size of the package does not matter; large or small, it is welcome. Contributions of clothing are welcome whether old or new. Canned food is a most practical gift to send.

"Contributions should be mailed at once in order to arrive in time for Christmas distribution. However, packages that do not arrive in time for Christmas will be none the less welcome. Your package coming from you, an American, in addition to brightening an otherwise dull and somber season, will be contributing in no small way to the good will and faith in our democracy that is so necessary in our efforts toward world peace."

men-of-war, ready and able to protect the interests of freedom and democracy, is a reassuring symbol to the harassed peoples of Greece, Turkey and Italy.

We have made great strides since the confused days of 1945, when demobilization and disarmament on a vast scale were all but destroying the mighty military machine it had taken five years, hundreds of billions of dollars, and the combined efforts of all Americans to build. Unification, under the National Security Act of 1947, is working. The functions of the various services have been clearly defined so that no doubts remain as to the responsibilities and objectives of each. Within the Navy, our training and promotion systems have been reorganized and improved, our rating structure revised, and the Naval Reserve integrated in every field of activity. We are now slowly increasing our strength again toward that point of preparedness commensurate with the missions we are expected to perform.

Our first great post-war ship construction and conversion program is under way, with an emphasis on the lessons and techniques learned in wartime and with full appreciation of the importance of continuous research and development of new weapons and counter-measures.

The basic concepts of warfare change but little throughout the centuries. The weapons alone change from generation to generation from war to war. As long as men must travel over, on, or under the ocean areas of the globe, ships will be necessary. As long as men derive their livelihood from the sea and transoceanic commerce, ships are essential. And as long as those ships exist, and the lifelines of commerce are utilized, navies must also exist to protect them and ensure them safe use of those lifelines and free access to their terminals. No nation is more dependent on sea commerce for its continued primacy than we are. That is why we must always be prepared to protect their freedom and guarantee our peaceful use of the ocean highways.

That is why annually on Navy Day we renew our allegiance to the Navy and remember its heroes and our comrades of the past. That is why we hold "open house" on our ships in all ports and at all Naval establishments ashore, and invite Americans everywhere to inspect the well trained sailors and Marines, the fine ships and the modern equipment which comprise our sea-air power today. We seek by this display of our efficiency to merit the continued support of the American people.

We of the Navy appreciate the stupidity and waste of war. We appreciate the heavy cost of adequate preparedness. But until that day when war shall have been effectively banished from the earth, we must seek security and peace through strength. Only thus, can we keep faith with the 400,000 fine young Americans who did not return from World War II.

Navy Selection Boards

Selection Boards to consider Navy officers on active duty for promotion to lieutenant, lieutenant commander, captain, and flag ranks, were announced yesterday. Promotions will be made for Line, Medical, Supply, Chaplain, Civil Engineers, and Dental Corps, with the Nurse Corps and Medical Service Corps included as part of the Medical group.

Selection in all grades may be made from among all eligible officers, but from the grade of commander and below only five percent of the permanent officers selected may be junior to the promotion zone.

Navy officials said the convening dates of the boards will be as follows:

Line—Flag rank 15 Nov.; Capt. 29 Nov.; Comdr. 17 Jan.; Lt. Comdr. 24 Jan.; and Lt. 1 March.

Medical—Flag 14 Jan.; Capt. 26 Jan.; Comdr. 2 March; Lt. Comdr. 2 March; and Lt. 11 April.

Supply—Flag 18 Jan.; Capt. 31 Jan.; Comdr. 3 March; Lt. Comdr. 3 March; Lt. 12 April.

Chaplain—Flag 19 Jan.; Capt. 1 Feb.; Comdr. and Lt. Comdr. 4 March; and Lt. 13 April.

Civil Engineers—Flag 20 Jan.; Capt. 2 Feb.; Comdr. 16 March; Comdr. and Lt. Comdr. 16 March; and Lt. 14 April.

Dental—Flag 21 Jan.; Capt. 3 Feb.; Comdr. and Lt. Comdr. 17 March; and Lt. 15 April.

The Navy said no precise prediction could be made at this time concerning the extent of the promotion zones. However, to assist eligible officers in preparing for promotion examinations, officials indicated that the promotion zone may include some or all of the Naval Academy classes and officers running with Naval Academy classes as follows:

Capt., Class of '30; Comdr., class of '39; Lt. Comdr., class of '45; and for Lt. those Lt. (Jg) with date of rank prior to 1 Jan. 1946.

The Navy said definite promotion zone limits will be announced before the boards are convened.

Reserve officers on continuous active duty, who are paid under the appropriation "pay and subsistence of Naval personnel" and USN (T) officers are on the lineal list and will be eligible for selections to temporary promotions in accordance with the foregoing schedule.

As for Reserve officers on active duty who are paid from appropriations "Naval Reserve," the Navy said that plans for their promotion are being prepared and selection boards are slated to begin about April 1949.

Only selected Regular commissioned officers will be required to take written professional examinations. The Navy also announced that on 7 Dec. 1948 examinations will be given to certain design-nated line Ensigns as part of their qualifications for promotion to the rank of Lieutenant (junior grade). This will mark the first time since end of World War II hostilities that written promotion examinations will be given.

U. S. NAVY & MARINE CORPS

The list of eligible ensigns includes officers from the line and staff corps who will have completed the required service in grade between 1 Jan. 1949 and 1 April 1949. All line Ensigns who become eligible for promotion between April 1949 and 31 Dec. 1949 will be examined in May of that year.

Officers who pass the physical and professional examinations will be appointed to Lieutenant (junior grade) as soon as practicable after the day they complete three years' service in the grade of ensign.

Officers who reverted to the rank of Commander as of 1 Dec. and 31 Dec. last year because of limitation on the authorized number of Captains will, if selected for promotion be exempted from the written professional examination and will be examined on record if they desire.

Navy Enlisted Problems

"The primary obstacle to normal, decent living in the Navy is lack of adequate housing facilities," according to a recent report made to the Chief of Naval Operations.

The report was the result of a survey made, at the request of the C.N.O., by the Right Rev. Maurice S. Sheehy, Ph.D., Head of the Department of Religious Education at the Catholic University.

Monsignor Sheehy stressed the housing problem in his report and declared that "livable housing developments should have highest priority." Some housing, originally intended for service personnel, has been turned over to civilians, he pointed out, adding that "the situation in Washington (D. C.) and Norfolk is extremely serious." Some men, he said, are paying fifty percent of their salaries for a one-room apartment or hotel.

Made as a preparatory study to a Navy Internal Public Relations Program, the report brought out a number of interesting facts: Most of the 482 men interviewed declared that they had joined the Navy for career reasons. Eighty-two men joined up "to win the war or serve their country;" 75 donned the Navy uniform "for adventure and travel."

Bitter complaints were registered against civilian discrimination, according to the report. Only about one-third of the men felt that they were treated fairly in the community in which stationed. Others said that there was social discrimination against their wives.

The Navy's Role in MATS

By REAR ADM. JOHN P. WHITNEY, USN who served as Director of Naval Air Transport Service and Deputy Commander of the Naval Air Transport Service from November 1944 to July 1946. He is now Vice Commander of the Military Air Transport Service.

THE merging of the Naval Air Transport Service and the Air Transport Command into the Military Air Transport Service brought to a close a colorful chapter in the history of Naval air transport operations. It opened a new era in military organization and operations.

From its inception on 9 March 1942, with one squadron of five R4D aircraft, 27 officers and 150 men, NATS spread its wings in rapid expansion until by VJ-Day, 540 aircraft were carrying cargo, passengers and mail over routes which spread from Tokyo to Naples and from Adak to Rio. These operations were conducted in direct support of Naval and Marine fleet operations, and in general served only those organizations.

Since 1 June 1948, Naval and Air Force transport squadrons have been unified under one command to function in support of all branches of the Armed Forces. Operating regular schedules over some 70,000 miles of routes, MATS transports expedite the movement of personnel and vital cargo, and provide air evacuation of sick and wounded from foreign theaters to major Service hospitals within the United States.

The operation of the Military Air Transport Service illustrates the development of the Armed Forces organization under the Unification Act of 1947. It shows that personnel and equipment from two Services of the National Military Establishment can successfully work within one command. This does not imply that there exists perfect agreement on all questions. There does exist, however, a wide area of agreement reached by mutual understanding and discussion of the techniques developed by each Service through years of transport flying.

Combining the best features of the old services, MATS planners formulated new operating manuals and new forms for use throughout the system, each major change requiring the approval of both the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics and Air Force Headquarters. A system of allocations of space and tonnage for regular flights was devised to provide equitable airlift for each of the Services. Consolidation of terminals, buildings, equipment and services was a task of considerable proportion. With these and a multitude of other problems to solve, the process of integration has encountered complexities.

While still in its infancy, MATS was directed to augment the Berlin Airlift, necessitating a reduction in transport service to the Armed Forces overseas. The plan evolved to accomplish the Villes assignment required the withdrawal of most Air Force units for duty in Germany and permitted MATS Naval components to continue in their regular fields of operation but with greatly increased airlift responsibility to all forces in those fields. Villes has been a challenging test of MATS' ability to rally all resources—to meet swiftly an emergency in a distant and critical area. We have met that challenge.

Naval air transport participation in support of Operation Villes is considerably more extensive than is generally appreciated. Too frequently, the concept prevails that the Berlin Airlift is a self-sustained, limited operation, bounded by the air bases in western Germany and by Tempelhof and Gatow in Berlin. Little realization is given to the fact that the roots of the operation are in the United States and that the services which sustain that effort across 3,000 miles of water and land are as important as the shuttle itself.

Aircraft engines, maintenance personnel, tires, crew replacements and mail are but a few of the items Navy squadron VR-3 has carried to Frankfurt from the United States. This squadron, diverted from transcontinental and Caribbean operations in July, has transported some 4,500 passengers and more than 800 tons of cargo on its trans-Atlantic flights in direct support of Villes. Fifty per cent of the total military airlift on this route is now supplied by VR-3.

MATS Navy squadrons in the Pacific, although far removed from the Villes front, provide indirect support for that operation. MATS squadrons VR-6 and VR-8 have assumed the full task of military air support for our forces from Hawaii west to the Orient, thus releasing all Air Force units from Pacific operations to the Airlift Task Force in Germany. Mars flying boats are carrying 250 tons of passengers, cargo and mail monthly from San Francisco to Honolulu. With only a twenty-five per cent reduction in total tonnage from the July figure, these units are maintaining our scheduled service throughout the Pacific theater, including air evacuation.

The obvious manifestation of unification is in the mingling of uniforms in the chain of command through all levels. Aviation Machinist's Mates work alongside their Air Force equals; mixed crews share the responsibilities of the air evacuation flights carrying patients of all three services. In MATS Headquarters the key positions are assigned among MAT officers from the Navy as well as from the Air Force. An officer of either service may command the organization.

Maj. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, USAF, now commands the Military Air Transport Service, and I support him in the number two position as Vice Commander. Capt. Robert W. Morse, USN, is Director, Plans and Operations, dealing with problems affecting every activity of the Command, while Capt. Calvin E. Wakeman, USN, is the Deputy Commander for Air Transport.

In the Pacific theater Rear Adm. W. G. Tomlinson commands the integrated operation, in Pacific Division, aided by a staff of Naval and Air Force personnel. Continental Division operations are directed by Major General Nowland, USAF, with Capt. D. W. Tomlinson, USNR, as Deputy Commander.

Naval personnel and Naval transport aircraft of the Military Air Transport Service serve the National Military Establishment. They have merely broadened their mission to provide essential airlift to all the U. S. Armed Forces throughout the world.

Modern Naval Ordnance

BY REAR ADM. A. G. NOBLE USN
Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance

WHENEVER Naval ordnance is mentioned, the temptation is almost irresistible to lead off with the reminder that combat planes and ships exist to carry ordnance. It is perhaps as desirable to repeat this statement frequently as it is to remind Naval officers assigned to non-operative billets, that their primary purpose is to serve the operating forces.

Rear Adm. Noble

It will be recognized that the term "Modern Ordnance" is not a very explicit one. Modern ordnance can be good or poor, depending upon how much has been done to achieve it. The atom bomb in World War II was an example of modern ordnance at its best. So was the VT fuze. Both resulted from an immense outlay and concentration of money and scientific skill. Normally, during peacetime, comparable accomplishments require a much longer time, so that their relative value is reduced. If the pace is too slow, these could be relatively poor compared with what a potential enemy has. And yet the title "Modern Ordnance" might still be vaguely deserved. In peacetime, it is not to be expected that enough money and skill can be utilized to create the newest and very best ordnance in every category. Instead, it should be expected that concentration will be mainly on a few critical weapons whose employment is of paramount importance. Without divulging details of specific weapons, it may be stated that the program of the Bureau of Ordnance is properly oriented in this respect.

The Bureau's program receives its emphasis from an analysis of two criteria. The first consists of assumptions regarding potential enemies' modes of attack or defense. The second lies in the proven degree of effectiveness of various weapons to accomplish their purpose. For the latter, we have a wealth of experience in World War II from which to draw. For the former, it is apparent that the Navy must gird for air warfare, undersea war-

U. S. COAST GUARD

RADIO operators employed on merchant vessels after 1 April next year will be required to hold a license issued by the Coast Guard. Merchant Marine Inspection Notice No. 32-48, currently being distributed, contains preliminary instructions regarding the licensing procedures. All applications must be approved by the Coast Guard Commandant, and Headquarters plans to notify the various radio officer organizations that the program has been started. The organizations will be requested to assist in notifying all their members to make application as soon as possible. All applicants must be citizens of the United States and must furnish documentary evidence of such citizenship at the time of application.

Boards to investigate two casualties involving tug boats have been designated fare and amphibious operations. Consideration of both criteria has resulted in overwhelming emphasis being on the development of superior anti-aircraft, aircraft, submarine and anti-submarine ordnance.

Anti-aircraft ordnance is being pushed for the dual reasons that attack from the air is certain in any future war and because surface anti-aircraft ordnance has the most room for growth. In fact, there is so much room for improvement that some maintain the gun is through as an anti-aircraft weapon. Others maintain that guns will always play some part in anti-aircraft defense. Current development assumes that both views have merit. Ground-to-air guided missiles are being developed as rapidly as possible and parallel with the development of new rapid fire, high velocity guns with superior types of automatic fire control and proximity fuzes. It is probable that the more successful versions of these guided missiles and gun systems may find themselves side-by-side on future Naval ships. It is also probable that ships so armed may become largely self-sufficient in defending themselves against attack from piloted aircraft. Missiles, given adequate homing and guidance systems, should outperform piloted aircraft in many respects because the latter must always be limited by human endurance.

Airborne ordnance of wide variety is being hurried along. Much new design and departure from past convention are necessary to keep such ordnance abreast of air frame and power plant improvement. Each added increment of speed and performance multiplies the problems of ordnance design. Certain combat functions, formerly handled by the eyes and hands of pilots, gunners and bombardiers must now be done by automatic electro-mechanical systems. The carrying and launching of ordnance pay loads from very high speed aircraft poses many new problems. Often these problems are not susceptible of exact solution. Appendages to an aerodynamically clean airplane are unwelcome, but often have to be accepted.

Guided missiles seem to offer the ultimate answer in the field of air-to-air and air-to-surface ordnance. The fighter must be equipped so that it can destroy its adversary without having to get close enough to smell his exhaust fumes or describe the color of his eyes. This problem is being attacked from several directions. The several directions are represented by stepped up gun power and fire control, improved rocketry and air-to-air homing missiles.

Heavier aircraft are receiving an ordnance face lifting also. Improved bombs, bomb sights, guns, rockets, mines and torpedoes are in the making. Air-to-surface guided missiles are in the picture, their arrival having been marked in 1945 by the Commandant. The steam tug boat Ann Marie Tracy sank with apparent loss of nine lives as a result of a collision on 2 Oct. with the Liberty tanker Eliza Jane Nicholson in the Hudson River. On 5 Oct., the uninspected motor tug boat Arundel capsized during a gale and sank near Seven Foot Knoll, in Chesapeake Bay. Seven men are listed as missing in this casualty.

Marion K. Reynolds, boatswain's mate first class, was recently awarded the Treasury Department's Gold Life Saving Medal for "heroic action beyond the call of duty."

Reynolds had previously received the American Legion's "Medal of Valor" as Coast Guard "hero of the year 1947." Both awards were earned by Reynolds for his heroic action in rescuing a shipmate who fell overboard during a storm at sea.

by the successful service use of the "Bat", self-homing glide bomb. Since that time, experiment with similar devices has gone steadily forward. Requirements for air laid mines and other weapons designed to bottle up or destroy surface and sub-surface craft are being met as rapidly as possible.

The submarine, by virtue of its concealment advantage and great operating radius, is likely to always be a powerful factor to be reckoned with in securing control of the sea. The well known fact that radar detection underwater is not feasible gives the submarine an advantage not possessed by any type of surface craft or aircraft. Add to this the fact that the sea covers about seventy percent of the earth's surface and the picture becomes clear. Enemy submarines must not be allowed to operate. Otherwise, our shipping and coastal areas are within the enemy's long, destructive reach. It is not secret, therefore, that weapons, designed for and against submarines, are receiving major emphasis. The difficulty to be experienced in locating enemy submarines must be countered as much as possible by weapons which will make the highest possible percentage of kills.

In the treatment of the subject "Modern Ordnance," a tendency may exist to overlook the weapons which were successful in World War II, now for the most part being held in reserve. These constitute modern ordnance because they will play a major role in any future war. Troops landing on enemy held shores will look to these weapons to blast a path ashore and keep it open. These weapons were notably successful in the past. Their ability to knock out invisible moving targets at great distances was proven against German panzers as well as against Japanese cruisers and destroyers. We believe that these weapons will be needed again in the event of war because relatively minor incursions will be needed to save sick patients which atom bombs would kill. A great deal of the Bureau's effort is devoted to keeping these ready for the unwanted day when any weapon which will contribute to a successful operation will be considered modern.

Army Temporary Promotions

Selection boards to consider Army officers, Regular and Reserve, for temporary promotions will be convened after 1 Jan., following completion of permanent promotions which are to become effective on that date.

The Army has not yet determined how many officers will receive temporary promotions early in 1949. Unofficially it has been reported that as a result of the Army's expansion, thousands of officers—particularly those in junior grades—may become eligible for temporary advancements.

Television in Recreation Rooms

Fort Monmouth, N. J., claims to be the first Army installation to provide television sets in all company recreation rooms.

AF Housing Shortage Critical

The Air Force is finding it increasingly difficult to hold skilled enlisted men of the first three grades—and the reason is lack of adequate housing—Secretary of the Air Force W. Stuart Symington said last week.

"I consider adequate housing for dependents of airmen one of the most serious problems confronting the Air Force today," Secretary Symington told delegates to the Air Reserve Association convention at Orlando, Fla.

He said these men cannot be replaced except by others who must undergo long training at great expense. "We simply must solve our housing problem and retain experienced personnel," Secretary Symington asserted.

And at the annual convention of the American Legion in Miami, Fla., General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff, said that in addition to thwarting reenlistments, the AF housing shortage "aggravates highly undesirable social problems involving family breakups. It deprives the bulk of married personnel and their children of the home life which other Americans properly expect and enjoy."

General Vandenberg noted that while one base reports a reenlistment rate of about 90 per cent, the commander of a base where housing is not available said reenlistments are down to eight per cent.

Warns of "Vittles" Crashes

The Nation must be prepared for an increasing loss of airmen on the Berlin airlift with the onset of Winter weather, General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff, warned this week.

"Winter flying conditions are close at hand in Western Europe and we must anticipate mounting operational losses of crewmen and planes," he said. "To date the operation has been handled with remarkable safety. We have flown special navigational equipment across the Atlantic for installations along the corridor, but even so, one must expect a less favorable safety record when bad weather descends."

General Vandenberg told delegates to the American Legion Convention at Miami, Fla., that the Air Force has no qualms about its ability to keep the airlift going—even to increase delivery of tonnage—but he added: "We must be realistic. There will be plane crashes with some loss of crewmen."

AF Screening Board

The Air Force screening board to review the records of officers for possible classification as "substandard" is slated to meet at the Pentagon about 15 Nov.

Five general officers will form the membership of the board, but their identity has not yet been announced.

Creation of the board follows publication of regulations concerning removal of officers from the active list under provisions of Public Law 810.

33rd Fighter Wing Transferred

The Eighth Air Force's 33rd Fighter Wing, now based at Walker AFB, N. M., will be transferred to Otis AFB, Falmouth, Mass., it was announced by Maj. Gen. R. M. Ramey, Eighth AF commander. The move will be completed by 16 Nov.

The 33rd, a jet fighter wing flying the F-84 "Thunderjet," is commanded by Col. Gwen G. Atkinson, former head of the 27th Fighter Wing, Kearney AFB, Neb.

Meritorious Unit Commendation

The 1388th Army Air Forces Base Unit in Newfoundland has been commended for performance of outstanding service from April 1945 to February 1946.

U. S. AIR FORCEAF Generals Reassigned

Reassignment of four U. S. Air Force general officers was announced this week. Maj. Gen. Eugene L. Eubank, commanding general of the 13th Air Force, Far East Air Forces, with headquarters at Clark Field, Luzon, Philippines, will become Chief of the Air Force Manpower Group at USAF headquarters on 1 Nov.

Maj. Gen. Thomas D. White, commanding general of the Fifth Air Force in the South Pacific since January, 1948, has become Director of Legislation and Liaison in the Office of the Secretary of the Air Force.

Brig. Gen. Jarred V. Crabb, deputy commanding general of the Ninth Air Force at Greenville AFB, S. C., will succeed General Eubank as commanding general of the 13th Air Force in the Philippines.

Brig. Gen. Charles F. Born, commanding general of the Basic Training Wing of the Indoctrination Division of Air Training Command at Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, Texas, has been assigned as commanding general of the Indoctrination Division.

Air Force Band Exams

A supply of examinations to be given for promotion to the grade of staff sergeant in Air Force Bands was scheduled to be mailed this week to Command Band Supervisors.

They in turn will distribute the official tests to bandleaders who will administer the examinations to qualified bandsmen.

Examination forms for promotion tests to grades of technical sergeant and master sergeant are slated for early distributions. Officials hope that all tests will be distributed and completed before the end of the year.

It is reported that scores of vacancies exist for promotion of Air Force bandsmen to the top three enlisted grades.

When completed, the examinations will be sent to Washington for grading.

"Spirit of True Unification"

United States airmen are as certain the Berlin airlift will not be stopped by bad weather as they are sure that the "sun will come up tomorrow," Secretary of the Air Force W. Stuart Symington said this week.

"Never was there better evidence of the spirit of true unification than in this true humanitarian enterprise involving the joint team of the new Military Establishment—land, sea and air," Secretary Symington declared.

Speaking at the annual forum in New York sponsored by the New York Herald Tribune, Secretary Symington added:

"This air lift show is really part of the Army, because the Air Force reports to General Clay, Theater Commander, just as the Army reports to the Air Force in Alaska; and both Army and Air Force report to the Navy in Hawaii.

"At each base one notes the Army trucks, in perfect order, lined up as far as the eye can see, with the exact amount each plane can take. And as an instance of aid from the Navy, between June 26 and October 1, Navy tankers delivered more than 40 million gallons of aviation gasoline to Germany, and at this time are sending five tankers a month into Bremerhaven as against two and a half previously."

B-50's to Alaska

The Air Force's 43rd Bomb Wing, a Strategic Air Command medium bomb unit equipped with Boeing B-29 Superfortresses and Boeing B-50s, will rotate three five-plane units of B-50s to Alaska for 45-day special field exercises between 1 Nov. and 15 March.

A five-plane B-50 flight will be sent from each of the three squadrons of the 43rd Bomb Group, which is a unit of the 43rd Bomb Wing. They will be the first B-50s ever in Alaska.

Army-AF Housing Plans

The Army and Air Force announced recently new military construction worth $87,853,364, including the building of 1933 family housing units to supplement the 941 units announced early in August.

Of the total 2874 housing units thus far announced, 1,607 will be constructed for the Air Force and 1,267 for the Army; 2,247 will be located in the United States and 627 overseas.

Lt. Gen. R. A. Wheeler, Chief of Engineers, will supervise all construction.

Preliminary work on the first group of scheduled housing is already underway and actual construction is to be started within the next few months. The badly-needed family quarters will be finished as quickly as possible. Completion of the units will help, to a small degree, to alleviate the general housing shortage, for as they come into use by the Army and the Air Force, the civilian dwellings now occupied by military personnel will be released for use of civilian population.

Most of the family units will be two-story, multiple-unit types, with six to eight units in a single building. Plans specify 1,080 square feet for each family unit, consisting of three bedrooms, a dining room, living room, kitchen, and bath.

Allocation of the housing projects to the various Army installations and Air Force Bases was made on the strength of housing needs at installations throughout the world. In allocating the projects, special consideration was given to isolated installations where the lack of any local housing made the shortages of living space acute.

Following is the list of construction projects:

Army Construction in the U. S.

Ariz.—Yuma Test Branch, family housing (18 units), $144,770; quarters for 62 bachelor officers, $183,600; Post Exchange, $41,250.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1948

"Today our security is again gravely menaced, but we have unbounded confidence in our sea defenders and we know that they will not fail us."—GENERAL OF THE ARMIES JOHN J. PERSHING, 8 Oct. 1940.

NAVY Day, with the Fleet showing its ships in ports at home and abroad, should inspire in our people a determination that the Sea Service shall have the funds to continue the program of modernization so essential to making it as effective in the future as it proved to be in World War II. Control of the sea always has been and always will be vital, but with technical developments the means and methods necessarily have undergone a change. For instance, the once great battleship is no longer the major expression of sea power. This is evidenced by the fact that we are keeping only one of our 16 battleships on active service. Britain, of the same view, has scrapped or stricken from the official list a total of ten battleships—two-thirds of her total, while none of the remaining five is retained in operational service. On the other hand of our 36 aircraft carriers, we are keeping 14 on active service and 22 in reserve. In submarines we are keeping a much greater percentage active—80 of our 175. Meanwhile we are building and experimenting with new types and adopting new methods such as cargo and troop carrying submarines and anti-submarines. Recent announcement that two submarines are to be converted for duty as radar picket vessels shows a further extension of their usefulness. In light of Russia's large submarine fleet, including Germany's latest models, and the fact that she has been maneuvering these in the Pacific, the wisdom of our submarine and anti-submarine program is clear. To carry forward this program it is essential that Congress, backed by an aware public, provide the appropriations necessary to keep the Navy an effective part of a balanced Defense organization.

IN a surprise Executive Order the President directed the Secretary of Defense to strengthen the Reserve components of the Armed Forces. At the same time the President issued instructions to hold the defense budget for the next fiscal year to 14.4 billions. This amount is far less than that essential to National Security in this time of international tension. Mr. Truman indicated that his Executive Order pertaining to the Reserves was directed primarily toward the more rapid development of the civilian components of the Army and Air Force, which he felt had not progressed as far as had those of the Navy and Marine Corps. He said his hope was that our annual military expenditures might ultimately be cut to between five and seven billion dollars. Apparently the President feels that the increased cost of expanding the Reserves should be met by a corresponding reduction in the Regular Services. In the light of present world conditions such an attitude is not only unwise, but dangerous. Everyone will agree that large, well-organized, efficient Reserves are highly desirable, but to curtail essential activities of the Regular Army and Air Force in order to build them up is the height of folly. Surely the President recalls the lesson of Pearl Harbor. He must know that we will have even less warning of a future attack than we had of that dastardly assault. He must realize that it will be our Regular Forces, supplemented by the M-Day units of the National Guard, that will have to fend the initial blows. Months will necessarily pass before the best of our Reserves are ready for action. It is naive to expect the enemy to delay or our allies to furnish a screen behind which we can muster our strength. Certainly we should build up our Reserves, but let us do it without sacrificing our Regular establishment, and without curtailing our essential military requirements. Any weakening of our Regular Forces will be immediately reflected in a weaker Reserve. As the President recognizes in calling for young and vigorous officers to instruct the Reserves, the Regular Services must furnish not only the instructors, but also the leadership and direction of the whole Reserve program. They cannot perform this important duty unless they receive adequate support from the Executive and Legislative branches of our government. Our Regular Army and Air Force today lack the personnel, equipment, aircraft, weapons and facilities absolutely necessary to provide minimum National Security. Similarly the National Guard is short of equipment, armament and training facilities essential to its immediate needs. These essentials should be given first priority in the limited expenditures planned for the next fiscal year. Supplementary budget estimates should be authorized to meet the President's Reserve program.

AGAINST the increased hazards of winter weather, the Air Force is pitting its best fliers and its best navigational radar equipment. General Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff, revealed this week that special navigational equipment has been flown across the Atlantic for installation along the air corridor to Berlin. In addition, flying men with the greatest experience and training in instrument flying are being sent to Germany to apply the lessons developed from recent blind-flying tests. Meanwhile the Navy is stepping up its schedule of deliveries of aviation gasoline—five tankers a month now leave their cargo at Bremerhaven while other shipments to the United Kingdom are building up our strategic stocks for the direct support of the Berlin airlift. General Vandenberg has warned that with the onset of hard winter weather we must be prepared for increased operational losses. Nevertheless, the Nation should realize that every safety measure will be taken consistent with the carrying out of the national policy.

After the doctor had looked at the painting a few minutes, the artist asked: "What do you think of it?"

"It looks like pneumonia to me."

F. E. W.—Active commissioned service performed prior to 7 Dec. 1941 may not be counted for promotion purposes under the provisions of PL 381, 80th Congress. Accordingly, you did not have 7 complete years for promotion purposes on 30 June 1938 and were not entitled to automatic promotion to the grade of captain at that time.

P. W. L.—The Reserve Branch, Department of the Air Force, has advised us that subsistence allowances and flying pay are not included in the pay of Air Reserve Officers who participate in unit training at the present time.

M. M. L.—According to The Adjutant General's Office a warrant officer who has been previously retired will not be affected by the new warrant officer grades. His retired pay will not be based on the active duty pay of grades not in existence at the time of his retirement.

Now is the time for all good, sound-thinking men and true to come to the aid of National Defense. It would be a calamity indeed if some distinctly pacifist plan should be adopted and advertised and receive popular support. And this simply for lack of a sensible plan submitted by some one conversant with the value of military preparedness toward the maintenance of peace.

50 Years Ago

The Adjutant General is forming a plan for giving the younger officers of the Regular Army a term of duty in Washington. He proposes to designate officers successively for four months' tours of duty in the Military Information Bureau.

80 Years Ago

Military men generally have come to the conclusion that such a corps (Signal) is an absolutely essential part of the organization of a grand army. By means of flying telegraph trains (a battery truck, 2 wire trucks, and a lance truck), the commander of an army can constantly keep up a telegraphic communication with his subordinates. Although we have still much to learn in this branch of the military art, our progress has already attracted the attention of foreign powers, which have asked permission to have officers of their army instructed in our system of signalling by means of flags and lights, as well as in the use of the telegraph.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—At a press conference on Thursday in Washington General Lucius D. Clay, commander of American troops in Europe, said that there were no Soviet troop movements in eastern Germany or other indications that Russia might be preparing for war. He did say, however, that there are now between two and three hundred thousand Communist-trained German police in the Soviet zone and this number is being increased every day. The strength of this force is much greater than that which the Western Powers have felt it necessary to maintain in their zones. General Clay said that western Germany has made an unbelievable recovery since the institution of the currency reform a few months ago. In four months there has been a 35 per cent increase in industrial activity and the output of steel has doubled. Goods valued at sixty million dollars are exported each month. No comparable industrial acceleration has taken place in the Soviet zone.

General Clay praised the troops of his command, saying they were fine, well-disciplined purposeful soldiers. He was enthusiastic over the success of the Berlin airlift and the excellent professional performance of the airmen responsible for the operation. Between 3,000 and 5,000 tons are transported by air each day. General Clay is sure this rate can be maintained throughout the winter.

While the Security Council of the United Nations continued to discuss the Berlin crisis the Soviet authorities tightened their hunger blockade. Vehicular traffic now entering Berlin from the Soviet zone must first pass through the Russian sector for inspection before proceeding to the western sectors. This restriction is undoubtedly to prevent supplies from German farms and villages in Russian-occupied territory reaching residents of the blockaded sectors now solely dependent on the Allied airlift.

Soviet Delegate Andrei Vishinski continued to attend the sessions of the Security Council, but took no part in the proceedings other than to decline to furnish the Council with specific answers to questions relative to the blockade. Similar questions directed to the western powers were fully answered by their delegates. Members of the Council appeared to favor passage of a resolution requesting the immediate removal of all traffic restrictions affecting Berlin, regardless of their origin, followed by a meeting of the foreign ministers of France, United States, Great Britain and Russia. While such a resolution would not specifically condemn the Soviet blockade, it would be acceptable to the western powers, thus placing the responsibility for its acceptance or rejection squarely on the Soviet Union.

In a move to improve the efficiency of the Berlin airlift American and British cargo planes supplying the beleaguered German capital have been placed under the unified command of Maj. Gen. William H. Tunner of the United States Air Force. So successful has this operation been that the average daily German ration in the western sectors of Berlin has been increased from 1,800 to 2,000 calories. This amount, properly balanced, is satisfactory for sustenance, though it is only about two-thirds of the average daily consumption in the United States. The German ration is still deficient in fats and meat.

The United States won a notable victory in the Political Committee of the General Assembly of the United Nations when the American-supported proposal dealing with the control of atomic energy was adopted by a vote of 41 to 6, with only Russia and her puppets voting against it, though some other states refrained from voting. This proposal referred the question to Great Britain, France, the United States, China, Russia and Canada, with a view to reaching a decision whereby international control of this new force would become effective only after satisfactory provision for thorough, continuing inspection had been adopted by all countries. This was a rejection of the Soviet proposal for the destruction of American atom bombs, prior to or in connection with consideration of a system of inspection under the Security Council, whose actions are subject to a Russian veto.

At the request of Ralph Bunche, the American who succeeded Count Bernadotte as United Nations mediator in the Holy Land, the Security Council issued a cease fire order to Jews and Arabs who had been engaged in sharp fighting in the Negeb desert for several days in violation of the existing truce. The Israeli government blamed the fighting on the Egyptians who are reported to have attacked a convoy. Jewish troops anxious to retain possession of the desert, which Count Bernadotte had recommended be allotted to the Arabs, retaliated by seizing heights dominating desert supply lines. Casualties were reported comparatively heavy on both sides. Israeli planes repeatedly bombed Gaza, headquarters of the so-called provisional Arab government of Palestine, and other towns, with the result that Arab officials and other residents were put to flight.

Secretary of State George C. Marshall, who has been attending sessions of the United Nations in Paris, visited Athens and Rome during the week. In Greece he conferred with the king and other officials and with members of the American military mission. The Greek national army has been making unsatisfactory progress against the Communist rebels in the Vitsi area and elsewhere in Greece, and it is reliably reported that the Greeks are seeking additional aid from the United States. Secretary Marshall's visit is believed to have been for the purpose of insisting that the Greek government take more vigorous action in suppressing the uprising without awaiting additional American aid. In Italy the Secretary conferred with Premier Gasparri and Foreign Minister Sforza, and was received in audience by the Pope. Premier Gasparri indicated that he was greatly pleased by the Secretary's visit and spoke with renewed assurance of the prospects for continued peace.

Announcement has been made of the arrival in the American zone of Austria of two officers of the Soviet Air Force, who fled from Russia after listening to broadcasts of the Voice of America. Accompanied by a non-commissioned officer they left the Ukraine in a Soviet bomber after waiting more than a year for the opportunity. They crash-landed at an American air field near Linz. Subsequent to their landing Soviet liaison officers, with the permission of Lt. Gen. Geoffrey Keyes, interviewed the refugees for more than nine hours, but could not dissuade the officers from their decision to seek asylum in the American zone. General Keyes refused the Russian demand that the officers be returned to Soviet authorities, despite their desire to remain under American jurisdiction. The non-commissioned officer, who was not aware of the officers' plans, returned to the Soviet Union. The plane which was badly damaged was dismantled by Russian mechanics, with American assistance, and returned to Russia.

The complex procedure of choosing the National Council, the upper house of the French parliament, was begun this week with the selection of 100,000 electors by local governments. These electors will choose 320 members of the National Council. The feature of this preliminary election was the particularly poor showing of the Communists. They received about ten per cent of the vote, whereas in recent general elections the Communist vote was about 28 per cent of the total. At present 80 members of the National Council are Communists. In the new Council they expect to have not more than twelve. The De Gaulle party received about 13 per cent of the vote, instead of the 25 per cent expected, but General De Gaulle claims the support of many chosen under other party labels. Other rightist candidates ran well and the Socialists showed surprising strength. Indications are that the new Council will reflect a definite French trend to the right.

While unsuccessful in the election French Communists continued to inspire industrial strife throughout the republic. The coal strike was extended to the maintenance men whose walkout exposed the mines to danger of flooding. When police attempted to protect the mines there were sharp clashes at several points. In the Riviera a new rail strike tied up shipping.

The Labor party in England has issued a remarkable document, suggesting the economic and military union, but not the political union, of countries of western Europe, except Spain. It proposes a joint defense establishment so closely interwoven that it could not be unscrambled into separate forces of the constituent countries. The Labor party does not speak with the official authority of the British government, but it is the largest political party in England and its leaders form the current British government. Hence its pronouncements may be fairly regarded as expressing views widely held in official circles.

A sudden Communist revolt in Southern Korea is occasioning considerable anxiety. It was inspired by Reds who had infiltrated into the army of the new Korean republic. About 4,000 troops joined in the uprising, killing 100 police and capturing two towns. Martial law was declared and the government announced that it had suppressed the insurrection. The revolt was timed so as to coincide with the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Northern Korea. Were it successful it would undoubtedly be followed by a move of Russian-trained Northern Koreans to establish Communist control over all Korea. A few days prior to the uprising an attempt to assassinate Korean President Syngman Rhee was frustrated.

Navy Dental Corps—Rear Adm. Clemens V. Rault, Assistant Chief of Bureau for Dentistry and Chief of the Dental Division, has been invited to represent the U. S. Naval Dental Corps at the First Annual New Orleans Dental Congress, 24 to 27 Oct. Capt. John A. Walsh, Chief of the Dental Service, St. Albans Naval Hospital, has received authorization orders to attend the Annual Seminar for the Study and Practice of Dental Medicine to be held in Palm Springs, Calif., 17 to 21 Oct., inclusive. Capt. Everett K. Patton, Commanding Officer of the Dental Detachment, Paris Island Marine Recruit Depot, attended the Georgia State Dental Meeting in Augusta from 9 Oct. through 13 Oct.

Comdr. Frank E. Prates, member of the U. S. Naval Dental School staff, was the principal speaker at the Essex County Dental Society meeting, 13 Oct., at Newark, N. J. His subject, "Amalgam Technique," was highlighted by a demonstration of extensive silver amalgam restorations which were inserted by Commander Prates more than 10 years ago. The patient was a civilian resident of Newark who received the dental care while in the Navy.

Naval Aviation Medicine—Applications for the next course in Aviation Medicine are desired from medical officers of the rank of lieutenant commander or below. Regular Navy and Naval Reserve officers are eligible, but the applicant should have at least one year of obligated service or agree to remain on active duty for one year following the training.

This course will be held at the School of Aviation Medicine and Research, Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla., beginning 17 Jan. 1949. Five months of the instruction are given in the subjects of applied aviation physiology, otolaryngology, ophthalmology, psychiatry, cardiology and other subjects applicable to Aviation Medicine. Following this phase, students are assigned to flight indoctrinational training and ground school work, after which the successful student is designated a naval flight surgeon.

Applications may be made by dispatch, as they must reach the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery prior to 10 Dec. 1948.

Finance Department—Col. Emmett J. Bean, Commanding Officer of the Army Finance Center, St. Louis, Mo., visited the Office of the Chief of Finance last week.

Lt. Col. Samuel E. Burns, Chief of the Military Personnel Division, Office of the Chief of Finance, spoke on current Army personnel policies at a regular meeting of Washington Reserve Finance Officer at Ft. Myer, Va., last Monday evening.

Maj. Walter R. Jorgenson, formerly of the Army Finance Center, reported for duty in the Office of the Chief of Finance last week and was assigned as Chief of the Training and Service Branch, Management Division, replacing Maj. Alfred A. Abbott, who has been assigned as Assistant Executive Officer, Office of the Chief of Finance. Capt. William H. Loper has been Assistant Chief of the Training and Service Branch, Management Division, since last July.

Bureau of Medicine and Surgery—Rear Adm. Clifford A. Swanson, (MC), USN, Chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, received an honorary fellowship in the American College of Surgeons on 22 Oct., at the annual meeting of the American College of Surgeons held in Los Angeles. Rear Admiral Swanson was elected a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons in 1933. He now has the coveted distinction of being one of the few individuals in the world who holds both a regular and an honorary Fellowship.

On 27 Oct., Admiral Swanson will make a Navy Day address over radio station KROC, Rochester, Minn., and later in the evening will address the staff meeting at the Mayo Clinic.

Rear Adm. Paul M. Albright, (MC), USN, has recently been assigned as the District Medical Officer in the 11th Naval District. Admiral Albright was formerly the Assistant Chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery for Planning and Logistics.

Rear Adm. Joel T. Boone, (MC), USN, General Inspector, Medical Department, will speak under the sponsorship of the Navy League of the United States on Navy Day, 27 Oct., in Colorado Springs, Colo.

SAC Commander—Lt. Gen. Curtis E. LeMay this week arrived from Germany to assume command of the Strategic Air Command at Andrews Air Force Base near Washington. Before embarking on his new assignment, General LeMay conferred with Secretary of the Air Force W. Stuart Symington and General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff.

Air Force Reserve—The Air Force Reserve strength has grown to 264 combat-type units, 78 service type, 11 miscellaneous organizations and 339 composite units, the latter organized for Reservists who cannot participate fully in the training program.

Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, Commanding General, Air Defense Command, late last week told members of the Air Reserve Association at Orlando, Fla., that 21,227 officers and 23,001 airmen are assigned to Reserve TO&E units, plus 28,655 officers and 8,428 airmen to composite units.

Strategic Japan—If Japan should fall to the Communists, it would signify the loss of World War II for the United States, Canada, Philippines and Australia, Lt. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, former Commanding General of the 8th Army, said this week. He told delegates to the National Safety Council meeting at Chicago that if Japan came under Communist domination, "a potential defeat in the Pacific in any future war might be forced upon us."

Surplus Field Glasses—The Army has available at Augusta, Ga., Arsenal; Benicia, Calif., Arsenal; Frankford Arsenal, Philadelphia, Pa., and Ogden, Utah, Arsenal, a limited quantity of serviceable and unserviceable repairable field glasses, available to commissioned, warrant and flight officers at a cost of $15 and $7.50. Details are available in Circular 312.

Influenza Vaccinations—The Army and Air Force will not vaccinate personnel against influenza during the fall and winter as a routine procedure. Vaccination will be limited to groups determined by the Surgeon General and the Air Surgeon.

The Inspector General's Department—Brig. Gen. Fay B. Prickett, Department of the Army Deputy Inspector General, has completed the annual general inspection of United States Army, Pacific, and has left Hawaii for the mainland via MARS flying boat. Gen. Prickett was accompanied by four other officers of the Inspector General's Department, Col. G. G. Elms, P. L. Baldwin, H. D. Jones, and Lt. Col. E. H. Walker.

Signal Corps—Capt. H. E. Bernstein, USN, has been assigned to serve as Naval Advisor on the staff of Brig. Gen. Francis H. Lanahan, Jr., commanding general of Fort Monmouth, the Signal Corps' principal research, development and training installation. He is believed to be the first Naval officer to be assigned to the staff of the Commanding Officer of another service within the continental limits of the United States. Captain Bernstein will also be the Navy liaison officer for the U. S. Army Signal Corps Engineering Laboratories, commanding officer, U. S. Navy Electronic and Electrical Standards Agency, and the Navy's co-director of the Army-Navy Electronic and Electrical Standards Agency.

Mixed MATS Crews—As a result of an emergency situation created by "Operations Vittles," Navy pilots and Air Force navigators will fly together on Pacific Division flights of the Military Air Transport Service. Officials call this move a further indication of the successful unification of the Naval Air Transport Service and the Air Transport Command.

The assignment of Air Force navigators to these flights means that Navy pilot navigators will be available for duty as co-pilots on Trans-Pac operations.

Meantime, it is reported that all Air Force C-54 aircraft will be taken out of Pacific Division operations by the end of this month for service with "Operations Vittles."

Quartermaster Corps—The Quartermaster Subsistence School at the Chicago QM Depot has been changed from a class II installation to a class II activity under jurisdiction of The Quartermaster General.

Col. Frederick H. Koerber will retire on 31 Oct. and will be relieved from his duty as Chief of Laundry Branch, Field Service Division, Office of the Quartermaster General, Washington, D. C. Lt. Col. William D. Smith, Jr., has returned from Panama and is now assigned to the Training Branch, Personnel and Training Division, OQMG. Col. Harry V. Ellis will retire on 31 Oct., on his own application after 30 years of service. Colonel Ellis will remain as assistant to the Depot Commander at the Chicago Quartermaster Depot until the effective date of his retirement.

Women's Army Corps—Col. Mary A. Halleran proved indefatigable as she compressed visits to six First Army installations into a one-week tour of the area. The Women's Army Corps Director not only made detailed inspection at the installations having WAC units but also devoted time to a conference on recruiting. The strenuous schedule was started off with an interview granted to her by General Courtney H. Hodges, First Army Commander, shortly after her arrival in New York.

Colonel Halleran, accompanied by Maj. Charles Kelly, First Army WAC Director, visited Detachments at Ft. Jay, Governors Island, N. Y., Camp Kilmer, N. J., Ft. Hamilton and Ft. Totten, N. Y., Ft. Dix and Ft. Monmouth, N. J.

Army Field Forces—General Jacob L. Devers, Chief, Army Field Forces, was in York, Pa., yesterday to address the Pennsylvania State Convention of American War Mothers.

Maj. Gen. Doyle O. Hickey, Assistant Chief for Developments, spoke to the members of the Detroit chapter of the American Ordnance Association, on 19 Oct., on "The Role of Armor in Future Warfare."

Col. Harold F. Handy, Training Section, addressed the Richmond, Va., chapter of the Reserve Officers Association on 16 Oct. On 22 Oct., Colonel Handy left Ft. Monroe to inspect training activities of the civilian components at Camp Kilmer, N. J., and Ft. Banks, Mass. He is scheduled to return 29 Oct.

Col. Dana G. McBride, Developments Section, visited Army Field Forces No. 1, Ft. Bragg, N. C., on 11 Oct., to inspect communication and electronic projects.

Col. George E. Lynch, Training Section, left for England on 15 Oct., to take part in an Infantry-Airborne Conference. He will return on 25 Oct.

Col. David H. Blakelock, Transportation Officer, left on 12 Oct., for a routine inspection trip. He will visit San Francisco and Los Angeles, Calif., and Seattle, Wash., returning to Ft. Monroe on 28 Oct.

Col. O. S. Rolfe, Developments Section, was in Washington, D. C., on 18 Oct., to attend a conference conducted jointly by the Office of the Chief of Engineers and the Office of the Quartermaster General.

Jet Fighters Handicapped—The probability that jet fighters will be less effective against bombers than propeller-driven aircraft has been expressed by a prominent Air Force officer. Writing in the Fall issue of the "Air University Quarterly," Col. Dale O. Smith, USAF, maintains that because jets have less range and duration than propeller-driven planes they will have less chance of making an interception.

Furthermore, says Colonel Smith, "once an interception is made, the jet will have less chance of hitting the bomber than did the old prop fighter." He explains that the speed differential between the bomber and the jet will be so great that the guns of the super-speed fighter will not bear on the target as long as did the guns of the World War II fighters. Also, says Colonel Smith, the jet plane will be forced to break off contact earlier because of rapid consumption of fuel.

"All in all," the airman concludes, "the jet fighter will not cause as many bomber losses as the prop fighter. The jet fighter is sure death to the prop fighter because the jet can make or break contact at will. But the jet will have less time to shoot down a bomber than before, and that time factor will save bombers that formerly would have been lost."

Ordnance Department—"The task ahead in this year of increased procurement is a big one, and it can be accomplished only we all maintain an all-out effort." Maj. Gen. E. S. Hughes, Chief of Ordnance, thus characterized the effect of the Army's expansion on the Ordnance job of procuring weapons and vehicles under one of the largest peacetime appropriations the Department has ever had. He was speaking to a meeting of the Chiefs and Deputy Chiefs of the 14 decentralized Ordnance District Offices in his office recently.

Called to Washington for a periodic orientation on current plans, policies, and operations of the Department, the District Office officials heard details of recent progress in mobilization planning and its relationship to procurement under the present appropriation.

Maj. Gen. A. B. Quinton, Jr., Chief of the Industrial Division of Ordnance, devoted most of the first day of the meeting to mobilization problems and procurement activities. Maj. Gen. Henry B. Saylor, Chief of the Ordnance Research and Development Division, discussed the work of his Division and gave some of the details of plans for 1949 and 1950. Brig. Gen. B. O. Lewis, (USA-Ret.), outlined current activities of the American Ordnance Association and told of some of the accomplishments of its technical committees. Other speakers during the two-day meeting were: Col. I. A. Crump, who dealt with personnel problems; and Mr. W. W. Storey, who discussed present and future budgets for the Ordnance Department.

Chaplain Corps—Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Matthew H. Imrie, officer in charge, Information Division, Office Chief of Chaplains, represented the Chief of Chaplains, Maj. Gen. Luther D. Miller, at the blessing of the Te Deum Window, Trinity Lutheran Church, Hagerstown, Md., 17 Oct.

Chaplain (Maj.) Karl L. Darkey, Assistant Executive Officer, Office Chief of Chaplains, preached at the Del Ray Methodist Church, Alexandria, Va., 17 Oct.

Chaplain (Maj.) David M. Kinsler, Lutheran, who has recently been transferred from the Eighth Army to the Headquarters and Service Group, has been assigned as the Chaplain at the Washington Heights Housing Area in Tokyo. Chaplain and Mrs. Kinsler will be in Quarters 227 at Washington Heights.

Chaplain (Capt.) Gomer S. Rees, 155th Station Hospital, APO 503, is the newly elected President of the Chaplain-Missionary Group which meets each month at the GHQ Chapel Center, Tokyo. Chaplain (Maj.) James J. McGoochan, (Roman Catholic), Office of the Theater Chaplain, has finished his tour of service in the FEC and has returned to the Zone of the Interior for his reassignment.

Jewish High Holy Day Services were conducted by Chaplain (Capt.) Edward Ellenbogen in Tokyo, Chaplain (1st Lt.) Milton J. Rosen in Yokohama, Chaplain (Capt.) Mordecai M. H. Daina in Kyoto, and Chaplain (Maj.) Samuel Rosen in the Philippine Islands.

Transportation Corps—The widow of Lt. Gen. Daniel I. Sultan, Commanding General of the United States Army Forces in the India-Burma Theater of Operations, and former Inspector General of the Army, presented a portrait plaque of her husband in a ceremony officially renaming the USAT Admiral W. S. Benson, as the USAT General Daniel I. Sultan, recently, at Pier 4, Brooklyn Army Base. Among the guests present were Maj. Gen. Edmund L. Daley, Veterans' Affairs, Albany, N. Y.; Brig. Gen. Paul F. Yount, Assistant, Chief of Transportation (Operations); Brig. Gen. George J. Nold, Division Engineer of the North Atlantic Division; Col. W. W. Wannamaker, District Engineer, N. Y. District, and former Chief of Transportation, Hqs., Armed Forces in the Western Pacific; Col. G. C. Bunting, Chief, Training and Organization Division, OCT; and Col. Ernest L. Lucas, representing the Inspector General, Department of the Army. The transport is now busily engaged carrying troops and Army dependents to Bremerhaven. Later this year, the 20,000 ton vessel will be transferred to the Pacific where she will do similar service in that area.

Brig. Gen. Walter J. Muller of the Office, Chief Army Field Forces, Ft. Monroe, Va., has been appointed Commanding General, Ft. Eustis, Va., succeeding Brig. Gen. George C. Stewart. General Stewart, who has been commanding at Ft. Eustis since 13 Aug. 1946, was officially relieved of his command at a review 11 Oct. He has been assigned as Assistant Commander of the 10th Division at Ft. Riley, Kans.

Military Police Officers—Many officers of the Corps of Military Police are presently serving with the Army Advisory Group at Nanking, China. Among them are: Lt. Col. H. T. Loftin, Maj. M. D. Baillie, Maj. F. K. Buck, Maj. F. H. Finnel and Capt. V. Hammonds.

Maj. J. A. Dasché is located in Shanghai, China, and Maj. Earl S. Bessmer and Maj. L. E. Griffith are serving in Japan.

Col. F. A. Kreidel, CMP, is on duty in Iran as Chief of Staff of the U. S. Military Mission to Iranian Gendarmerie and Capt. N. D. Rudziak is assistant Military Attache in Poland.

Maj. L. G. Turrov serves with the Office of Foreign Liquidation Commission at Paris, France, and Capt. A. Kohn is with the EUCOM Intelligence School. Maj. Fred Smith is serving in Germany.

Army Nurse Corps—Army nurses completing various courses offered as part of the Army Nurse Corps educational program during 1948 are as follows: In psychiatric nursing, 70; hospital administration, 47; anesthesiology, 25; operating room technique, 19; basic military training, 61; ward administration and supervision, 31; principles and methods of teaching, 39; nursing education, 11; and workshops, 27.

Navy Day Proclamation by President Truman

Whereas it is the purpose of the United States Navy to maintain sufficient strength on the sea and in the air to enable it, in conjunction with our armed forces, to uphold our national policies and interests, to protect our commerce, to support our international obligations, and to guard our country and its overseas possessions and dependencies; and

Whereas the Navy League and other patriotic organizations in 1927 selected October 27 for annual observance of Navy Day in commemoration of the founding of the United States Navy in October, 1775, and of the death of Theodore Roosevelt, who as Assistant Secretary of the Navy and as President of the United States contributed markedly to the development of the United States Navy; and

Whereas it has become customary for our citizens to join hands with the nation on October 27 of each year in rendering grateful tribute to our men and in according honor and recognition to the achievements of the men and women who compose its ranks:

Now, therefore, I, Harry S. Truman, President of the United States

NAVY DAY GREETINGS

by President of the United States

I hereby call upon the people of the United States to observe October 27, 1948, as Navy Day by displaying the flag of the United States at their homes or other suitable places, and I direct that the flag be displayed that day on all Government buildings. As commander in chief of the Armed Forces of the United States I direct that all ships of the United States Navy dress ship and that all posts and stations of the United States Navy, where practicable, be open to the public on Navy Day.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Seal of the United States of America to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this 5th day of October in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and forty-eight and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and seventy-third.

Harry S. Truman.

By the President:

Robert A. Lovett,
Acting Secretary of State.

FLEET ADMIRAL and Mrs. Chester W. Nimitz are in Washington visiting Col. and Mrs. Curt C. Schifferle at their home, Apple Hill in Chevy Chase, and were guests of honor at a dinner given by their hosts Monday evening, and with them attended Tuesday evening the Philadelphia Orchestra Concert.

Admiral and Mrs. Nimitz flew east from their home in California and were met on arrival by Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, widow of the late Chief Justice, and by their daughter, Miss Nancy Nimitz who lives in Washington.

The Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Kenneth Royall were among the guests at the house warming of the Assistant Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, at their newly acquired house in Georgetown, 1224 30th street, which they gave Sunday afternoon, 17 Oct.

The Air Force Band was stationed in the garden, very lovely on two levels, and as dusk approached, lighted by hurricane lamps, placed on the stone terrace.

Flowers were everywhere, many congratulatory gifts from friends. The Chief of Staff and Mrs. Omar N. Bradley were also guests at this gay party, and also in the throng were the Secretary of the Air Force and Mrs. W. Stuart Symington.

Mrs. Kenneth C. Royall, wife of the Secretary of the Army, and Mrs. E. Dorsey Foster, wife of Admiral Foster, head of the Navy Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, were guests of honor at a luncheon 20 Oct. held by the Quartermaster Corps Officers' Wives at Ft. Leslie J. McNair, Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Thomas B. Larkin, wife of The Quartermaster General, was hostess. Her aides for the luncheon includes Mrs. R. P. Hollis, overall chairman; Mrs. Arthur L. Marshall, music; Mrs. Thad Broom, Mrs. Roy Barton, Mrs. J. G. Holloway and Mrs. J. D. Martz, jr., announcements; Mrs. Charles Crosby, program; Mrs. George Hinman and Mrs. James F. Metcalf, publicity; Mrs. Kenney Brunsbold, seating;

SERVICE SOCIAL NEWS

MRS. MARTIN THOMAS TIERNAN,

the former Miss Katherine Brown-Campbell, daughter of Col. and Mrs. R. Potter Campbell, whose marriage to Mr. Tiernan took place in South Orange, N. J.

Mrs. Roy G. Loux, Mrs. William E. Barksdale and Mrs. Louis H. Shirley, flowers; Mrs. Roy T. Evans, Mrs. Norman P. Williams, and Mrs. Andrew T. McNamara, refreshments.

Following the luncheon, Mrs. Royall and Mrs. Foster were guests at a fashion show at which the Quartermaster Corps wives were models.

Forty-eight members of the Classes of 1923 of the Military and Naval Academies gathered for a joint luncheon at the Army and Navy Club in Washington on 13 Oct. The West Point group sponsored the affair with the enthusiastic support of the Annapolis members.

Col. C. W. Nist, as President of the local West Point contingent, acted as master of ceremonies. Mr. Gordon W. Daisley, vice president of the local Annapolis chapter, did the honors for the Navy.

As it happened, the attendance was exactly half and half: twenty-four Army and Air Force and twenty-four Navy. The gathering was considered a great success and plans for future joint affairs, including perhaps a "joint-joint" party to include the ladies, were discussed.

Those who attended from the Military Academy were, Biddle, Bowen, Caraway, D'Espinoza, Dunne, Edwards, Enslow, Fry, Gettys, Greiner, Gunn, Johnson, H. C., Johnson, W. G., Milton, Nist, Palmer, Reber, Roper, Salsman, Schaefer, Serig, Tredennick, Towle, and Webber.

Those who attended from the Naval Academy included, Ageton, Bres, Briggs, Casey, Dietrich, Folk, Fryberger, Gold, Guillot, Hamilton, Hederman, Johnson, Keith, Lewis, Murdaugh, Oliver, Ring, Roberts, Schade, Shoup, Sperry, Stephens, Withington, and Wright.

Weddings and Engagements

THE marriage of Miss Lella Harrison Keyes to 1st Lieutenant Levin B. Broughton, U. S. Army, was performed 25 Sept. by Monsignor Roman J. Nuwer in the Holy Trinity Church, Vienna, Austria.

Miss Keyes is the daughter of Lt. Gen. Geoffrey Keyes, U. S. High Commissioner to Austria, and Mrs. Keyes. Lieutenant Broughton, a graduate of the U. S. Military Academy, 1945, is the son of Mrs. Laurese McDonnell Broughton, of College Park, Md., and the late Doctor Levin Bowland Broughton, Ph.D., former Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at the University of Maryland. Lieutenant Broughton is presently assigned to Headquarters, United States Forces in Austria.

The guests included a large group of friends, representatives of the occupying powers, the Austrian government, and the diplomatic corps.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. William R. Desobry, as Matron of Honor. Miss Dorsey Harrison Desobry, the bride's niece, was the flower girl.

The best man was 1st Lt. William H. Jenkins, aide-de-camp to the USFA Chief of Staff. The ushers included: Capt. Hugh M. Wendle; Capt. George B. Lundberg; 1st Lt. Ira B. Coldren; 1st Lt. Geoffrey B. Keyes, brother of the bride; 1st Lt. Jack W. Kopald; and 1st Lt. Milton H. Hamilton.

The reception was held in the residence of General and Mrs. Keyes.

After their honeymoon along the French Riviera, the couple will return to the United States, where Lieutenant Broughton will be stationed at Fort Knox, Ky.

Among the guests who attended the wedding and reception were: Lt. Gen. Alexander Galloway, British High Commissioner to Austria, and Mrs. Galloway; Vice-Chancellor to Austria Adolf Schaefer, and Mrs. Schaefer; Mr. John G. Erhardt, U. S. Minister to Austria, and Mrs. Erhardt; Sir Bertram Jerram, British Minister to Austria; Mr. Gabriel Padovani, Consular to the French Legation, Vienna; Brig. Gen. Desmond D. Balmer, Deputy Commissioner to the United States Forces in Austria (USFA), and Mrs. Balmer; Maj. Gen. T. J. W. Winterton, British Deputy Commissioner to Austria, and Mrs. Winterton; Col. P. L. M. Carolet, French Deputy Commissioner, and Mrs. Carolet; Doctor Peter Krauland, Austrian cabinet minister, and Mrs. Krauland; Mr. Numan T. Seymen, Turkish Minister to Austria, and Mrs. Seymen; Mr. Abelardo B. Bueno do Prado, Brazilian Minister to Austria, and daughter, Miss Thelma do Prado; Minister Westmore Willcox, chief of ECA Mission to Austria, and Mrs. Willcox; Maj. Gen. Paul W. Kendall, commander U. S. zone, Austria; Maj. Gen. Robert T. Frederick, commander, Headquarters Command, USFA; Maj. Gen. John S. Wood, (Retired), chief International Refugee Organization, Austria; Brig. Gen. Thomas F. Hickey, USFA Chief of Staff, and Mrs. Hickey; Brig. Gen. O. L. Joppe, commander, French Command in Vienna, and Mrs. Joppe; Brig. Gen. Robinson Duff, commander, Frankfurt Military Post, Germany, and Mrs. Duff; and Brigadier O. L. Jones, British Chief of Staff, and Mrs. Jones.

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Ernest Marion Brannon of Washington, D. C., announce the engagement of their daughter, Joan Virginia, to Lt. Joseph J. O'Hare, son of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Joseph J. O'Hare of Fort Myer, Va.

Miss Brannon is a graduate of Immaculata Junior College and is a senior at George Washington University. She is a member of Kappa Delta and Tau Omicron Phi Army and Navy, sororities.

Lieutenant O'Hare is an alumnus of Phillips Exter Academy and Pennsylvania Military College. He served in the Pacific Theater during the war and recently returned from occupation duty in Germany.

The wedding will take place in the Spring.

Of interest to service society is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Barbara Millar Brennen to Frederic Sumner Brackett. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mrs. Gladys Millar Brennen of San Diego and Capt. James E. Brennen, USN, of Spokane, Wash., and Mr. Brackett, who has recently served in the Army Air Corps, is the son of Mrs. Margaret Brackett also of San Diego. The wedding will take place in February.

Col. and Mrs. Thomas B. Gale, USMC-Ret., of Arlington, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Vivian Gale, to Capt. Robert Hamilton Mattox, USA. The bride-to-be is a graduate of St. Agnes School, Alexandria, Va., and attended Colorado College, Colorado Springs, Colo.

Captain Mattox is the son of the late Comdr. R. H. Mattox, UN, and Mrs. Mattox of Norfolk, Va. He is a graduate of the class of 1943 at West Point and is at present stationed in Washington, D. C.

Miss Margaret Larner Wotherspoon and Lt. Comdr. Richard William Phillips, USN, were married Saturday, 10 Oct., in New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, Washington, D. C. The bride is the daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Alexander Somerville Wotherspoon of Washington, and her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Phillips of Auburn, N. Y.

Mrs. Hugh Ogburn of Princeton, N. J., sister of the bride, was matron of honor. The other attendants were Miss Jean Willard of Southport, Conn.; Mrs. William W. Wotherspoon of St. Louis, Mo., and Mrs. Charles Gehr of Syracuse, N. Y., sister of the bridegroom.

William W. Wotherspoon of St. Louis, Mo., brother of the bride, was best man, and the ushers were Hugh Ogburn of Princeton, N. J.; Legare Hole of Auburn, N. Y.; Lt. Comdr. Dudley Adams, USN, of Alexandria, and Lt. Comdr. Harry Alendorfer, USN.

A small reception followed the ceremony at the quarters of Capt. and Mrs. Wotherspoon at Naval Gun Factory.

After a honeymoon in Bermuda, Commander and Mrs. Phillips will live in Washington.

Lt. Col. and Mrs. Walter L. MacLachlan of West Newton, Mass., now on duty on Okinawa, announce the marriage of their daughter Paula-Marie MacLachlan to Mr. James Beckley Palmer, jr., on 7 Aug. The ceremony took place at the Second Church, West Newton, Mass., and was officiated by Rev. Dr. Clyde E. Yarrow. The groom is a graduate of Massachusetts Institute of Technology of June 1948 and a son of Dr. and Mrs. James Beckley Palmer of 230 Mt. Vernon St., West Newton, Mass.

The bride is a graduate of Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., in the class of 1947. After a honeymoon spent in New England, the couple left for Palo Alto, Calif., where the groom will attend the Graduate School of Business Administration at Leland Stanford University.

Col. John E. Curry, USMC, and Mrs. Curry announce the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth Darlington, to Ens. Edmund Broughton Kasner, USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Kasner of Avoca, Iowa.

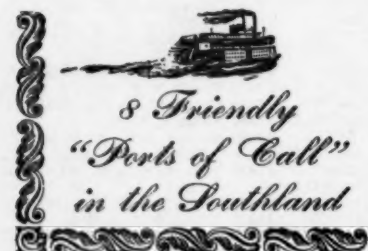

Miss Curry is the granddaughter of the late Rev. Edward Darlington Johnson and Mrs. Johnson of Annapolis, Md.

The wedding will take place in January.

The Post Chapel at the Fort Totten Army Medical Center was the scene of an impressive military wedding Saturday afternoon, 9 Oct., when Miss Marian L. Gurney became the bride of Capt. Bobbie E. Brown, Inf., Totten Army Medical Center, Fort Totten, Long Island.

Ushers were: Captains Lionel H. Schmahmann, Arthur Jemmot, Joseph O'Brien, Mario Smith, Joseph J. Curran, 1st Lt. Edward Harbert and 1st Lt. Robert Strickland. Lt. Col. Harris E. Dulin, Captain O'Brien's former battalion commander, was best man.

A reception was held at the Totten Army Medical Center, Officers' Club. (Please turn to Page 236)

OFFICERS OF THE ARMY!

The ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL began five weeks ago, publication of the first Promotion List of officers of the Army compiled under the provisions of the new law (Officer Personnel Act of 1947). Last week we printed the first half of the list of captains of the Regular Army promotion list, and this week we print the conclusion of that list.

Inasmuch as future selections will be made from these lists and that by reference to them you will be able to determine the relative position of those selected and those not selected it is important that you preserve these issues for reference.

If you are not a subscriber enter your subscription now. If your subscription is about to expire send us your renewal so that you will not miss any issues. Order promptly—the shortage of paper necessitates our limiting each issue to orders in hand.

"UNITED STATES AT WAR"

A limited number of copies of the Army and Navy Journal's historic volumes, "United States At War" is still available. This series, the first volume of which was published 7 December 1942 with succeeding volumes each year until the War's end, forms a complete history of World War II in authoritative articles written by Military, Naval and civilian leaders actually in charge of the operations in the active theaters and at home. Profusely illustrated, they merit a place in every well-balanced library.

A small number of each of the volumes is ready for distribution at $3.00 per copy in paper binding and $5.00 in cloth binding. (Copies of Volume I are available only in paper binding.)

MERCHANT MARINE

Merchant Marine

Gov. Earl Warren of California, Republican candidate for Vice-President, has called for the United States to have a merchant marine able to compete for its share of the world's commerce.

Speaking at a rally in Tacoma's National Guard armory, Governor Warren asserted that a growing and competitive merchant marine demanded new yard and dock construction and "maintenance of a large working force of skilled workers." He recalled that "there has never been a continuous long-range national policy for maintaining a strong, well-balanced shipping industry."

Governor Warren said that "we must have the foresight to develop a shipping industry that can make an honorable bid for its share of the world's commerce. It is about time for us to remember that a well-balanced merchant marine program is a peacetime need as vital to our industrial welfare as it is vital for our defense in wartime."

The privately-owned American merchant fleet increased by two dry-cargo vessels in September to a total of 1,202 ships on 1 Oct., according to the latest monthly summary of the National Federation of American Shipping. No new vessels were completed during September.

U. S. merchant fleet on 1 Oct. totaled 3,488 private and government-owned ocean-going ships of 1,000 gross tons and over, as against 3,495 vessels of same category on 1 Sept. Reduction of seven ships was accounted for by one vessel transferred to foreign registry and six scrapped or transferred to military service. The total active fleet dropped sharply during September and now consists of 1,675 vessels.

Financial Digest

The Department of Commerce reports a gratifying Fall increase in business activity throughout the United States, indicating a sustained high aggregate sales volume. Price trends are somewhat mixed, with industrial prices generally higher and a drop in agricultural commodities due to the record harvest. Advances are small in such goods as textiles, leather and shoes, where heavy demand backlogs have been largely met.

In August personal incomes reached a record high annual rate of 215 billions, due largely to higher wages. This situation is indicative of a continued rise in consumer spending. Industrial production in August and September showed marked improvement over July. Substantial gains were registered in the output of steel, lumber, textiles, tobacco, paper and industrial chemicals. Production reflected an increased abundance of available raw materials. While there was a notable increase in steel output, the available amount of this basic material is still insufficient for industrial demands and constitutes a limiting factor in many lines.

Commercial expenditures on new plants and equipment amounted to nearly five billion dollars in the third quarter of this year. The value of new construction in September was 25 per cent higher than in the same month of last year. Employment in this country is estimated at 63,000,000, with some 2,000,000 unemployed. The proportion of the labor force unemployed was Never lower than at present.

Favorable domestic conditions, together with projected defense spending and foreign aid, tend to confirm government conclusions that there will be a high level of business activity at least throughout the first half of 1949.

Army Reorganization

By COL. ALFRED C. BOWMAN, GSC
(Fifth in a series)

"HOW," we asked last week, "is the monumental accumulation of material which now constitutes the law of the Army, to be consolidated and restated in a manner which will produce both a sound statutory foundation for the Army and its business, and the convenient handbook which is so greatly needed?"

After consideration of various proposed short-cuts, the Statutory Revision Group found that the method in use by the principal compilers and publishers in the law-book field is, as might be expected, the only one by which the job can be done with the requisite thoroughness. The system requires patience, determination, and prolonged painstaking attention to detail, but the basic technique is simple.

The first step in any attempt to codify and restate the law is necessarily an "estimate of the situation" or "war plan" in the form of an analytical outline of proposed arrangement of existing law. As this is published, the task of preparing it has just been completed. The product of the effort is a comprehensive printed "Analysis for Revision," which lists by brief description, and tentatively classifies and arranges the various statutes or sections of the Code. In printed form it will comprise a booklet of about two hundred pages.

It is anticipated that the Analysis will be accorded extensive distribution within the Army and the Government. It will constitute the basic skeleton to which it is hoped the flesh of the law may later be made to cling.

In preparing the Analysis, precedent with regard to arrangement was largely disregarded. The material is divided into four functional parts—"Organization"; "Personnel"; "Intelligence, Operations and Training"; and "Service, Supply and Procurement."

Within the Parts, arrangement will also be primarily functional, featuring division into cohesive topics such as "Promotions," "Retirements and Separations," etc. Progress will be from one related topic to another, and from the general to the specific. The object will be to put all the law on a related subject in one place where a logical man may reasonably expect to find it if he has some familiarity with the Army's traditional divisions of staff responsibility.

This abandonment of the previous organizational pattern of the law will not change the substantive legal concepts themselves which will not by restatement and codification be in any way impaired. It is not intended that the Code, as such, will change anything except the arrangement and statement of the law. Substantive reform, if it is to take place, must come later and from other quarters. Restatement is concerned solely with stating what the law is now, in as simple, straightforward, and understandable language as possible.

The next step will be to sort out and arrange the conglomerate mass of source material in logical sequence in accordance with the "Analysis for Revision."

The basic unit will be a pack of cards. Copies of all the principal sources of basic law—The Statutes-at-Large, the Code, the Annotated Code, the Military Laws and the Digests of Opinions of the Judge Advocate General, have callously been literally ripped and clipped asunder. Each section of each work having any possible interest for the Army has been pasted on a card, the color of which varies (for easy identification and classification) according to the source.

There are, so far, about eighty-six thousand of these cards altogether. In the aggregate, they constitute what we call the "Plant."

In the first instance, the cards will exemplify the state of the law itself—an overlapping and conflicting complex of disconnected statements of legal principle, often archaically expressed, and in varying degree outworn, superseded or executed.

When all the cards have been arranged according to the Analysis, each Army officer who has been designated as a Legal Editor for the project will draw a "hand" containing or referring by annotation to all the sources of basic law and its interpretations related to a logically-segregated topic. His job will be to compare, study and analyze his cards, carefully evaluating the manner in which the law has been stated in the various basic sources. He must consider the way in which it has been explained and implemented by courts, by administrative agencies and officials, and by the administrator (Army Regulations, etc.). He will try to discard the obsolete, ambiguous, redundant and useless, and to build up, strengthen and restate the good and necessary.

After much research, many a reference, numberless committee meetings and conferences, occasional severe headaches both literal and figurative, and specific instructions from higher authority, the Legal Editor will be able to place his cards on the table and display an arrangement which, while not necessarily a royal flush, will be a winning hand.

Then he will draw another hand and start again.

The product of each hand will be a greatly simplified restatement of a particular aspect of the law. The successfully completed game will be The Army Code.

Medical Shortage Critical

A critical shortage of medical personnel which threatens to become worse was reported this week by General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff, in an address before the American Legion convention at Miami.

He said that a campaign to sign up civilians for medical and dental staffs has resulted in the procurement of only 19 doctors and dentists.

Meantime, overall Army medical statistics, which include Air Force medical personnel, reveal that several thousand doctors are needed immediately. The Army and Air Force have 4,640 doctors, but of this number approximately 1,000 are former A.S.T.P. students completing obligatory tours of duty. Another 1,000 doctors are interns and residents. This means that the actual immediate shortage is more than 2,000 doctors.

As for dentists, the Army and Air Force have 750 on duty now, need an additional 1,400 for current needs and will require twice this number by 1 July 1949.

A total of 4,300 nurses are on duty, with an additional 1,700 needed immediately.

With regard to the Air Force's particular problem, little different from the Army's critical medical situation since both services must obtain personnel from the same meager sources, General Vandenberg said at Miami:

"We have 800 Medical Corps officers on active duty in the United States Air Force. We Minister to Yugoslavia, is still accepting contributions from $1 to $5 for a memorial to the five Air Force fliers shot down over Yugoslavia in 1946. These contributions should be addressed to Mr. Lane at 2442 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., Washington 8, D. C.

need 1,482. By August 1, 1949, we will be down to 291. Separations could whittle this down to 210 by June 1, 1950.

"We have 258 Dental Corps officers. We need 761. By June 30, 1949, we may be down to 228.

"This leaves us in a tough spot. You can go to any number of Air Force bases and find only one or two doctors in the whole place. Where there is one, he is just about on 24-hour-a-day duty, seven days a week.

"At Bolling Air Force Base, near Washington, each doctor in the station hospital averages 75 hours' duty weekly. At Langley Air Force Base, Virginia, they are averaging 80 hours weekly. Grenier Air Force Base, New Hampshire, one of our big installations is down to two Medical Corps officers.

"This is bad enough. But when you consider that we are expanding our present 55-group Air Force toward the 70 group size authorized by the last Congress, you can see the fix we are in.

"Men and women of the United States Air Force are entitled to the finest possible medical care. I am confident the American Legion and the American people want no less."

Shore Construction Program

BY REAR ADM. J. J. MANNING, CEC, USN
Chief of the Bureau of Yards & Docks
NAVY DAY of 1948 finds the Bureau of Yards and Docks hard at work planning and developing naval shore facilities vital to the efficiency of the fleet in the critical days ahead.

Although the volume of construction is small as contrasted to the huge construction program undertaken during World War II, the physical size of the program is no measure of its scope. Instead, new developments in offensive weapons of war demand an extraordinary variety of shore facilities as well as an intensive research program looking to the development of new equipment and devices. In brief, emphasis has shifted from volume of activity to variety, with research assuming unprecedented importance.

Complicating the problem is the knowledge that a future emergency will strike with a minimum of warning and with tremendous initial force. It can be assumed that any declaration of war will be made long after hostilities have begun and that there will be no "breathing space" after the initial attack. Therefore, in addition to developing adequate facilities for the support of the fleet and its air arm, the shore construction program must be so planned that it can be implemented and expanded at high speed under the most adverse conditions.

Immediately following World War II, the Bureau's efforts were devoted principally to the deactivation of bases, preparation of berthing facilities for the inactivated fleet, and disposal of wartime real estate and miscellaneous facilities excess to peacetime needs.

New construction, except for armories for the Naval Reserve, and a few major facilities like the 1,000-bed naval hospital at Houston, Tex., and interim housing at naval bases and stations, was of relatively secondary importance. In addition, no new public works funds were made available during fiscal 1948.

Thus, during the first three years after the war, the Bureau of Yards and Docks was engaged largely in "roll-up" work—and with planning for the time when a full scale of postwar construction program could be undertaken.

The latter was made possible when, in the closing days of the 80th Congress, new public works funds were voted. Today, construction is underway on a variety of installations both in continental United States and overseas.

One of the largest single projects the Bureau is now constructing in the United States is the Naval Air Missile Test Center at Point Mugu, Calif. Test ranges are being built there for development and evaluation of guided missiles and their components, and facilities for fleet personnel being trained in their use and maintenance.

At Inyokern, Calif., the Navy's largest continental project, an aerodynamics field laboratory, a ground range for development and test of Navy weapons, various technical buildings, and housing facilities are being provided.

At White Sands Proving Ground, Las Cruces, N. M., where high-altitude photographs of the earth were made recently from V-2's and Aerobees, the Bureau is building long range test facilities for guided missiles and living quarters for personnel.

Also a huge new laboratory has been built at White Oaks, Md., including wind tunnels for research in ballistics and guided missiles.

These are continuing projects on which initial work has been done. At other locations large-scale construction will start in the near future.

An example of the large-scale undertakings planned is the Aeronautical Turbine Laboratory shortly to be built at Trenton, N. J. This $23,000,000 project will provide facilities for testing, under simulated altitude conditions, of turbine engines, their components and accessories.

Overseas, work is proceeding on the development of several bases which will form an important part of the naval shore establishment. The largest of these is Guam, where construction underway includes a major new harbor, numerous buildings and extensive utilities and services. Scheduled for early construction is a $25,000,000 Naval Medical Center.

Important work also is underway at Adak, Alaska. Construction includes various buildings, storehouses, utility systems and services, as well as a radio station and supplemental radio activity. This will cost about $13,000,000. When this construction, plus the work of converting temporary facilities to permanent ones, is completed, the naval shore establishment will include well-equipped bases ready for full-scale service in case of war.

The Bureau of Yards and Docks is also busy developing new equipment, materials and construction methods of its own.

Considerable research is being devoted to light-weight construction and power equipment, capable of being airborne. At the Navy's new Alaska test station, the Bureau is seeking to develop lubricants, fuels, tools and equipment adequate for use in polar regions.

In addition, a new Civil Engineering Laboratory has just been established at Solomons Island, Md., where the Bureau can perform research it is now forced to have done for it under contract at various colleges and universities.

This research is vital to the security of the naval shore establishment, just as a strong, well-planned shore establishment is vital to the security of the country.

Supplying Navy's Sea-Air Forces

REAR ADM. E. D. FOSTER, SC, USN
Chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts

THE task of supplying the sea-air forces of the Navy has become ever more complicated and important until, today, the material logistics considerations of an operational plan are serious and challenging and demand fullest attention. Only two centuries ago, the vessels of a Fleet could be provisioned; their sails, rigging and sticks replaced; and their bottoms repaired at most any port of call. The material needs of the vessels were few and the most technical equipment required for the high-seas combat of that day were the smooth-bore muzzle-loading cannon which were employed. The material logistics problems of Fleet Commanders were, therefore, inconsiderable.

Even in recent times, before World War II emphasized for all, the urgent importance of material matters, the Navy supply system was relatively simple and concerned itself principally with clothing, subsistence and general stores items. The result was that only about 250,000 items were actually stocked and readily available for issue and use within the Navy, and the organization and supply facilities which existed were similarly inadequate to supply fully the needs of naval war. Although the Navy, between wars, was a technical machine, the numbers of units were comparatively few; they were engaged in peace-time training operations in a limited number of areas; introduction of new equipments to use was a gradual process because of enforced economy in use of appropriations; a buyers' market existed; and the Navy's requirements for spare parts and equipments were of low volume and, therefore, a small part of the whole demand upon industry. General Navy dependence upon dealers' and manufacturers' sales stocks of standard technical equipments and technical spare parts for support of the Fleet was the net result of these factors. A technical supply system, measuring up to the development which had occurred in the technical equipments requiring support, was not built until the demands of all-out war showed the inadequacy in war of the elementary technical supply system which did fulfill the requirements of peace-time training and operations.

With the war, the Navy's supply system became Big Business. The newest technical developments in naval weapons and equipments were translated into assembly line schedules, almost overnight, and then became mandatory Fleet requirements for waging modern naval warfare shortly thereafter. The far-flung operations of the Fleet, all over the world, and the tremendous expansion of all parts of the Navy, industrial as well as operating and training, stretched and multiplied the parts of the Navy's supply line in all points of the compass. The overwhelming demand upon industry for parts and material, as well as equipments, made dependence for support upon manufacturers' and dealers' stocks patently impossible. As an example of the problem, the number of separate items which it was necessary for the Navy to stock increased during the war from the pre-war 250,000 items to approximately 5,000,000. The length of the combat supply line is revealed by the fact that it required 70 tankers plying the Pacific in order that one tanker might be maintained at Okinawa to fuel the Fleet. More and more, supply was integrated with the supported operations to the point that, immediately following the end of the war, the Secretary formally integrated Navy supply with Navy operations, maintenance and training, at all levels, by approval of the structure and concept of the present Navy supply system.

The solution to any military supply problem is the same as that comprised within the Navy supply system. Very simply, the problem is to provide the right material and spare parts required by Navy personnel, Navy maintenance and overhaul and Navy operations, in adequate quantities, where required, and prior to the time of need. At first blush the problem appears easy. Over a long period of peace, when the Navy is restricted in size and activity, the problem is dangerously simple and solution may become dangerously routine. The danger arises from the very simplicity of the problem and the invitation implicit therein to maintain organizations and procedures and to implement concepts which are equally simple, in order to provide only for fulfillment of the minimum supply needs of peace, which are inadequate as concerns war-readiness of the supply line.

The Navy supply system provides the maximum of reasonable war-readiness and integration of the Navy supply line with operations and, at the same time, assures the real economy in areas of import which is consistent with mandatory responsiveness of supply to the needs of the responsible operational commanders. The concept as implemented provides the necessary functions and procedures, and includes the organization and physical plant necessary to carry them out.

The functions and procedures of the Navy Supply System give recognition to the fact that, in war, there is a limit to the productive capacity of the nation and, therefore, they give recognition to the urgent necessity that, in war, Military consumers must limit the item range and quantity volume of Military demand upon the economy and restrict the needs for transportation, storage and handling facilities employed in the distribution process. Those functions and procedures provide for exact identification and cataloging of all items to prevent unknown duplication in purchase, stocking, distribution, etc., of the same item; for comprehensive inventory reporting by field activities, for each broad category of material, such as aviation, to a centralized control office for that category; and for reporting by operational and industrial consumers of end-usage or issue data to the same central control office. They provide for centralized inventory and distributive control, by board categories of material, to the end that future operational overhaul and maintenance programs are translated into future gross requirements for comparison with central records of material on hand or on order to derive future purchase requirements, in order, ultimately, that only those items will be purchased or stocked which are actually needed by known programs and which will not be available unless purchased. Conformance with the business-like operation here generally presented is assured by Bureau of Supplies and Accounts supply cognizance of the whole system under the business policy guidance of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and the Chief of Navy Material.

The organization and plant of the system give principal recognition to the necessity for close and responsive relationship between military supply and military operations and industrial functions and, therefore, to the need for specialization in Navy supply according to the broad general categories of the Navy weapons and equipments which are supported. Organizationally, the system is not only responsible to the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts for business guidance, as above mentioned, but each central control office is responsible to the Technical Bureau, having basic technical jurisdiction over the category of material which it controls, and via the Technical Bureau, to the Chief of Naval Operations, for conformance with technical engineering considerations and for supply fulfillment of operating plans.

The effectiveness of the system is a matter of nearly dramatic record. During the war, one control office, alone, the Aviation Supply Office, compiled an amazing record of savings, by application of the procedures and methods mentioned above, during a period when chief emphasis was upon effectiveness and not upon economy of support. For a 20,000 item range of aircraft engine spare parts of one manufacturer, the Aviation Supply Office was able, during mid-war years, to cancel $275,000,000 from outstanding contracts and to reduce to 4200 the number of separate items which it was necessary to stock by application of cataloging and usage information. Also during this period, the same office was able to reduce the range of aircraft airframe spares being sent to the Pacific combat theater by 48% without loss of effectiveness in support. Even in fairly common items, savings and greater effectiveness were achieved. It was found possible to reduce the number of separate items of rivets carried from 3,300 to 311.

These examples of dollar savings and quantity reductions are very important only in consideration of their broad military and national economic implications. Such examples represent reduced demand upon all aspects of national productive capacity in time of war when that capacity is strained to the utmost. They represent, military-wise, a reduced requirement for material, storage facilities, transportation, etc., in the supply line and, therefore, simplification and greater effectiveness of that combat life line.

The Navy and its supply bureau are well along towards extending the procedures, methods and organizational pattern, which have, here, been only briefly indicated, to the whole gamut of Navy material. If war comes again, the Navy supply system will be as ready as are the Carrier Task Forces.

Sports Front

ARMY got a bit of a scare from a tough Harvard eleven before pulling out its fourth straight win of the current campaign. The Crimson battled their favored opponents to a 7-7 stalemate in the first half, but the Cadets struck twice in the third quarter to sew up the ball game, 20-7.

Gil Stephenson, who scored all three touchdowns for West Point, bids fair to become the unheralded sensation of eastern football this year. The yearling, who has been looking better with each successive outing, now finds himself leading the Army attack in yards gained and in scoring, while his very respectable average of 6.6 yards per try places him third among the eleven backs who have lugged the leather.

On 30 Oct., the Cadets will meet V.P.I. at Michie Stadium. This one should be just about the easiest of the season for Army.

Navy lost to Missouri, 35-14, and the score just about tells the story of the game. A methodical Tiger eleven, fairly obviously playing under wraps, did about what it pleased with the Midshipmen. Missouri rolled up its five touchdowns before Navy was able to score its first.

The game was just about over, and many of the patrons had already left when Navy came to life. True, Missouri was using third and fourth stringers at the time, but so was Navy. A youngster unit didn't believe that a little thing like a five-touchdown deficit should keep them from hustling, so they racked up a pair of scores.

There was one other bright spot in the afternoon of the Navy adherents. The Midshipmen's marching band, just a week old, made its debut, and an impressive one it was. Numbering over 100 pieces, the band went through its paces at half time, serenading the two schools with their respective alma maters and going through the convolutions generally expected of college bands. They even had a drum major replete with two-foot shako who pranced up and down the field at an unbelievable gait.

The band, entirely organized and managed by undergraduates, was the brainchild of Midshipman Jack Peters, who is its leader. Peters deserves to be complimented for presenting what appeared to be a polished organization, rather than a week-old unit.

Navy's opponent on 30 Oct. will be the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame, who will be encountered at Baltimore. It will, unfortunately, take a great deal more than a band to give Navy much chance in this one.
